A DESIRE TO KNOW

What Consumers Had to Say About the

DUKE OF DURHAM

CIGARETTES

Prompted us to go in person to see a few of the retailers in the different portions of the city, and we let them tell the story in their own way:

JOSEPH LYON,
Fifth and Olive streets:

"They have been going very well. Parties are coming right along the third and fourth time for them, and some say they are the best they ever smoked, and won't have any other."

THATCHER'S CAFE CIGAR STORE,
215 Sixth street:

"Selling like hot cakes. Just got them in a few days ago and are nearly all gone. One man has bought four packages, and pronounces them the best he ever used. Several have had the second and third package, and everybody likes them."

WALKER & SEARLES,
406 Olive street:

"I think I am judge of good cigarettes, and I think they are the best on the market. Just got them in late yesterday, and they are going very fast. They will soon be the leader."

MARTIN POLLACK,
Northeast corner Third and Washington ave.:

"Selling well. Everybody well pleased who have tried them."

A. VICK,
303 South Fifth street:

"They sell well and give first-class satisfaction."

ST. JAMES CIGAR STORE:

"First lot entirely gone. Just bought 1,000 more to day. Everybody seems to want them."

OWL CIGAR STORE,
115 Olive street:

"Last package gone. Will get another thousand this evening. They sell very well."

Want of space crowds out several others. We find them in nearly every store, and, as a rule, they are taking the lead. Of course there are a few who have not gotten them yet; and a few consumers say they are rather milder than they like, but the great majority are pleased and speak well of them. The retail trade supplied by any of the following well known jobbers:

THEATER BURNED.

Columbus Grand Opera-House Destroyed Early this Morning.

COLUMBUS, O., December 16.—A fire was discovered in the Grand Opera-house at 3 o'clock this morning, and was not controlled until daylight. It originated from the furnace beneath the entrance door on the first floor, burning the office and soon spreading to the amphitheater. The firemen worked hard, but the building was gutted, and the only thing saved was the stage, the drop-curtain being all that was burned there. The interior is a mass of ruins. E T. Mitkoff, the owner, suffered a loss of $15,000; fully insured. He will arrange to rebuild at once, but cannot get ready for further business this season. Theodore Morris, lessee, loses considerable personal property, with the season's business. He puts his loss at over $50,000. The house was packed last night to hear "Fun on the Bristol," and had fire then broken out at the entrance during the performance, there would have been a great calamity. It is thought the fire started soon after midnight. As it was, no one was hurt. Lawrence Barrett was to begin an engagement of three performances to-night, and dates were secured for every night for next month and late in the season.

Railroad News.

NEW YORK, December 16.—The report of a dividend on the Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans Road is premature. The question is under consideration, but nothing is determined. There is some idea of a closer union between the Illinois Central and the Chicago, St. Louis and New Orleans Companies, but the matter has not yet assumed a definite shape. The latest report is that one per cent will be paid on the Michigan Central. Plans are nearly perfected by the English Land Companies for the purchase of large tracts on the line of the Pacific and other Western roads. There is a good borrowing demand for New York Central, Lake Shore and Michigan Central.

Indications.

WASHINGTON, December 16.—Tennessee and Onio Valley, warmer, fair weather, southerly veering to westerly winds, lower pressure. Lower Lake Region, increasing cloudiness, possibly local rains, warmer southerly veering to westerly winds, lower pressure. Upper Lake Region, partly cloudy weather, with light rain or snow, warm southerly winds, falling followed by rising barometer. Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys, partly cloudy weather, light rains or snow, followed by clearing weather, southwest veering to colder northwest winds, rising preceded in south and east portion by falling barometer.

Brutal Double Murder.

HOT SPRINGS, ARK., December 16.—One of the most brutal murders ever known in this section was perpetrated on Wednesday night a mile north of here. The victims are an old farmer, Wm. Supplis, and his wife, and the supposed author is one Flanagan, who is alleged to be cranky. Suppiis had his head severed from his body and both were badly mutilated.

Hat Factories Burned.

XLVII. CONGRESS.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, December 16.—The President pro tem. is authorized to fill the vacancies caused by the recent changes in the committee membership and other like vacancies previously existing.

Bills were introduced and referred. For the suppression and prevention of pleuro-pneumonia in neat cattle.

To authorize the erection of a statue to Chief Justice Marshall.

By Senator Camden. For a further appropriation to continue the improvement of the Little Kanawha River in West Virginia.

House.

WASHINGTON, December 16.—The Speaker announced the following special committee on expenses attending the illness and burial of President Garfield: Taylor Pound, Cox (New York), Joyce, Lefevre, Belford, Blackburn, Page, Springer, O'Neill and Shelley.

Mr. Robinson of New York rose to a question of privilege. He stated he had a resolution he desired to offer. During the recess of Congress an officer of this Government connected with the State Department had usurped the privileges of the House.

The Speaker: The gentleman has already disclosed he desires to proceed to business.

Mr. Robinson: This is a question involving the privileges of the House.

The Speaker: It is not a matter relating to a member of the House.

Mr. Robinson: It relates to the whole House. It is usurpation by a department of this Government. It involves the imprisonment of our citizens abroad. We can get nothing into this Congress. The rights of our citizens cannot be heard. [Loud cries of "order, order."] I will not press it now, but you will hear from me again.

The call of States was then continued at the point where left unfinished on Tuesday last.

The following bills were introduced and referred:

By Mr. Hubbell: To amend the act to reduce the internal revenue taxes.

By Mr. Willitts: To regulate suffrage in the Territories and to fix certain qualifications for office; also to provide for oaths for jurors in trials for bigamy in Territories; also relative to the crime of bigamy and proof thereof; also to provide for the registration of voters in Utah Territory; also to reorganize the legislative power of Utah; also granting a pension to the father of the late Gen. Custer.

By Mr. Lord: Respecting the sections of the revised statutes relating to the tax on banks and bank notes and the national banking associations; also to repeal the tax on bank checks; also to repeal the internal revenue tax on medicines, perfumeries, etc.

By Mr. Burrows (Mich.): Relating to the recovery of damages for the infringement of patents.

The Guiteau Trial.

WASHINGTON, December 16.—The Prosecuting Attorney was a little late in reaching the Criminal Court this morning, and Guiteau improved the opportunity to make one of his little speeches "to put in the time." Looking over to the vacant seat he said with a chuckle: "I understand Gen. Reynolds is sick this morning. I wonder if Corkhill is? I guess they got more than they wanted yesterday. It's about time for Corkhill to get sick and stay sick."

GEO. D. BARNARD,

Deputy Clerk of the Supreme Court of Kings county, N. Y. took the stand to prove the divorce of Anna J. Guiteau from the prisoner. Witness presented the record to the court and the order of the Judge for his (witness') attendance here.

Scoville objected to the admission of the papers upon the ground that they were not certified to by the clerk of the court as required by the act of Congress. The court overruled the objection and admitted the papers as originals in the case. The papers set forth the granting of an absolute divorce upon the ground of adultery, no answer having been made by the defendant.

Guiteau, referring to the woman named with whom he had committed adultery, said: "This woman Jennings was a high-toned woman in New York. It was purely a matter of business between us. I committed adultery with her to get rid of a woman I did not love. I thought it a much more moral course than to live with her and have children year after year. I have been strictly a virtuous man for six years past and have always been a high-toned Christian man."

Scoville desired to note the exception to the admission of the evidence.

Guiteau (with impatience): "Oh, what's the use of quibbling over that. I admit my marriage and my divorce. I don't care for that. I can get married again anywhere outside of New York State, and for that matter in New York too, under the new law there. If a man leads a strictly virtuous life for six years after being divorced, the courts will let him marry again. Why, I could get married in New York to morrow if I wanted to."

GEN. REYNOLDS

was called. Guiteau at once broke in petulantly, saying: "I hope you will cut off Gen. Reynolds and not waste any more time on him. He told all he knows about this case and a good deal more."

Mr. Scoville cross-examined witness. Guiteau frequently interrupted, contradicted and insulted the witness. At one time he shouted out, "I would have been hung one hundred times last July but for the national troops, and all through your lying and Corkhill's. I am going to get even with both of you too."

Witness explained that when he visited Guiteau, his trial had not been arranged. President Garfield was still living, and he (witness) had no thought of being subpœnaed as a witness.

"You lie," shouted Guiteau; "you came to my cell as a spy in the employ of the District Attorney."

SPRINGFIELD NEWS.

Death of an Old Citizen—Railroad Bonds—Political.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, MO., December 16.—Hon. Frank L. Frazier, of Boone township, this county, died this morning after an illness of several weeks. He was a distinguished character in this county. Before the war he represented this district in the State Senate and was a member of that body in 1861, and seceded with Jackson's Government at Pineville. At the close of the war he returned to Green county, where he has rebuilt his financial fortune. He always took an earnest interest in the State and represented Green county in nearly every Democratic State, county and Congressional convention since 1870. His family are descendants of Daniel Boone and are numerous and respectable. He will be buried to-morrow by the Masonic fraternity.

The proposition to compromise the fraudulent railroad bonds of this county, to be voted on January 10, is meeting with general opposition.

The congressional canvass in this district is opening, and numerous candidates are in. The most prominent are Morgan of Barton, Phelps of Jasper, Phelps of Greene, and Parkinson of Bates. Ex Gov. Phelps is not receiving much encouragement for the nomination. His old, tried and true friends don't rally as of yore. Even his former faithful organ, the Springfield Leader, is throwing cold water on his candidacy.

LATER POLITICAL NEWS.

Investigating Sherman.

WASHINGTON, December 16.—The sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Appropriations, appointed to investigate the contingent fund accounts, met this morning. Col. R. J. Hinton, editor and proprietor of the Washington Sunday Gazette, was examined as to his knowledge of the truth or falsity of the charges published in his paper, affecting the integrity of Secretary Sherman and a number of other Treasury Department officials. He testified that he had no personal knowledge of the truth of the charges, but from information from various sources believed most of them could be substantiated, though it was not improbable some of them might be disproved. He suggested to the committee information corroborative of the published charges could be found in the testimony taken by the Melin investigation of the Treasury Dpartment officials, and further recommended the committee to summon Treasurer Gilfillan, Deputy Comptroller Torbell, Chief Clerk Power, ex-Custodian Pitney, ex-Appointment Clerk Lamphere and several others as witnesses, whose testimony would be useful for the purpose of the investigation.

A Civil Service Bill.

WASHINGTON, December 16.—Chalmers has a civil service bill to introduce this afternoon, which provides for the creation of a commission precisely like that named in Pendleton's bill, to conduct competitive examinations. The bill also divides the Government officers and employes into four classes and gives to each employe a term of four years of service. The term of service of each class shall expire upon successive years so that not more than one class shall go out of office in one year. It requires that the patronage shall be divided among the States and Territories in proportion to the population, and this commission shall see that this is equitably maintained. When an appointment is to be made the Governor of the State which is entitled to the place, the Superintendent of Education, the Congressman from the district entitled to the appointment and Senators from that State shall make a recommendation. The commission shall require the candidates to submit to a completive examination and recommend the one they deem most qualified.

The Christmas Recess.

WASHINGTON, December 16.—The House has adopted a resolution for a recess from December 21 to January 5.

LATER.

Guiteau's Divorced Wife Called to the Stand.

WASHINGTON, December 16.—Gen. Reynolds read from the notes he had taken on the occasion of his first interview with Guiteau, quoting the prisoner's words. He read:

"If there is a Stalwart in the land, I am he. Grant, Conkling, Logan and Gov. Cornell are big guns among the Stalwarts and I rank with them."

Guiteau retorted: "I never said I could rank with them, but as a matter of fact I think I can."

A number of newspaper slips which witness had read to prisoner at this interview to show him what were the sentiments of Grant, Conkling and others in regard to his (prisoner's) crime were then read by the District Attorney. When the letter to Gen. Grant was read, in which the writer, speaking of Guiteau, said: "My son tells me he is a dead beat," Guiteau became very angry and shouted:

"This is what Fred Grant says. He is a nice pill, isn't he, hanging around his father. I should say he's a bigger dead beat than I am."

Another passage was read which spoke of Guiteau's crime as "a most audacious act." Guiteau interrupted, "And so it was, to enter that depot and shoot down the President of the United States surrounded as he was by all his friends. I have wondered at it a good many times how I ever did it. I thought to myself this morning I would not undertake it again for a million dollars, but I was in such a desperate state of mind I could not resist it. I was impelled upon the President by a pressure I could not resist."

Ellen C. Grant was called and Guiteau shouted: "Mrs. Grant is the lady I boarded with prior to the 1st of July. She is a very fine lady and I owe her $47. I trust I shall pay you soon Mrs. Grant, as soon as these fellows holding fat offices shall respond to my call. (Striking the table excitedly.) I made them and if they don't soon contribute I shall call out their names in meeting."

Witness never suspected that the prisoner was insane.

Mrs. Anna H. Dunmore, Guiteau's divorced wife, was then called. Several ladies arose to leave the conrt-room. Guiteau moved uneasily upon his seat and, looking angrily towards the audience, cried out: "There won't be any smut on this examination. Ladies need not go out. They have no business to put this woman on the stand unless Corkhill wants to stir up filth. I say it's an outrage on humanity to drag this lady in here and have here character ripped up, as it will be. Corkhill ought to be ashamed of himself. He's worse than an old hog. I appeal to the court to intercept this infamous action of Corkhill's. Arthur ought to kick him out. I made Arthur President and have the right to demand he shall put some reputable lawyer in the place of this infamous Corkhill."

Very much to the surprise of every one, but two or three questions were asked the witness, and her statement in reply to the last question: "I never saw any signs of insanity in the prisoner while I lived with him as his wife," closed the examination by the prosecution.

Guiteau, with a sigh of relief, said to Corkhill: "Thank you, Mr. Corkhill, for the sake of her children. This is the most decent thing you have done in this trial. I expect, however, that Judge Porter and Davidge insisted on it, and they are both supposed to be decent men." Then turning impatiently to Scoville, "Now cut this short, and let's have something else."

The cross-examination of Mrs. Dunmore was tedious and wholly fruitless. As she left the stand Guiteau shouted after her. "I have not seen this lady for eight years. So far as I know she is a high-toned Christian lady and I have nothing against her. I wish her well in whatever station she may be." Recess.

Arndt, the Socialist who was arrested last night, nominally for threatening the life of Judge Dundy, but really to develop Arndt's connection with the assassination of Col. Smith, which facts transpiring this morning appear to fasten upon Arndt with a network of evidence from which he cannot escape. Arndt's strange and contradictory remarks about the murder before he was suspected are most damaging to him.

Pugilistically Inclined.

Sebastian Messner and Charles Kreitling were brought to the Chestnut street station at 2 o'clock this evening for indulging in a general fight on Park and Carondelet avenues. Kreitling visited a saloon to sell some hams and was surrounded by a number of patrons of the saloon, who helped themselves to one of the hams, when Kreitling remonstrated, and the barkeeper threw him out of the saloon bodily, but he clung to Messner, who was the leader of the gang, and both pummeled each other for several minutes. About two hundred people assembled around the combatants, among whom was Officer Fenlon, who marched them both to the station despite their strenuous efforts to resist.

A Case of Jim-Jams.

John E. Smith, living at 2002 Olive street, was a first-class case of jim-jams at 1:30 this morning, when he got out of bed and began skirmishing around with a revolver for an imaginary burglar. Smith got into the hallway and began turning the slugs in the revolver loose. He fired two shots, and then, the cylinder of the weapon becoming clogged, he seized it by the barrel and began to beat the front door with the butt. He hammered away until the revolver was accidentally discharged and Smith got a slug in his right hand. Officer Stewart was called in and pacified Smith, who was sent from the Dispensary to the City Hospital to be treated for a gunshot wound and delirium tremens.

Death of Mrs. Richard Ulrici.

Mrs. Richard W. Ulrici died at the Southern Hotel at an early hour this morning. Mrs. Ulrici was a member of a very old St. Louis family, the Pauls, and her sister married the late George R. Taylor. Her mother was a member of the Chouteau family. For some time past Mrs. Ulrici has been in failing health, and was a victim of rheumatic affections. She was possessed of considerable property, and her husband is one of the largest property-owners in the city. There are no children. The children of the late Geo. R. Taylor are among the nearest relatives of the deceased lady.

The Mercantile Club.

The Mercantile Club Committee, owing to the kitchen odor surroundings of the site selected for a club house on Pine street, between Fourth and Fifth streets, has abandoned the proposition to lease the Lucas property. Dr. Priest examined him and pronounced it a case of alcoholism, sending Parker to the City Hospital. On the way he died in the ambulance and his remains were taken to the Morgue. He was aged 50, an Irishman, and was single.

WHITE HOUSE ETIQUETTE.

Suggestions From Col. Ingersoll in the Nature of Reform.

Washington Special to Chicago Tribune.

"The President, they say, slept in the White House last night for the first time. It is a horrid, cheerless old barrack," said Col. Ingersoll to-day to a party of friends. "The President ought to have a home for his family like any other man. He is as much entitled to his privacy as any other American citizen. The Government ought to give him a house, and the custom should be established and maintained that nobody should go to that house unless he was asked to go. The President should use the White House as his office, and should go there regularly and do his official business; and there should be more system in the transaction of the White House business than there has been. The President ought not to be so accessible. There should be a Private Secretary who should be a man capable of saying No! and the President ought not to see everybody about petty offices. If he should arrange the business of the Executive on a proper system, the President of the United States might have six hours a day for play; but if the old system is maintained, he will have nothing but turmoil and trouble from the first to the last day of his administration. It should be considered polite for the President of the United States to receive people in their order, and to tell them Yes or No, and then to ask them to pass on. He ought not to be compelled to talk over the political situation every day with the American citizen from Gilligan's Mills. There are too many of those mills in this country—there is not enough of the President to go around. And, as to the great offices of the country, he ought to select a cabinet to make appointments, and give them instructions to consult the local political sentiment, so far as is possible, and not to trouble the Executive. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, for instance, should be held responsible for collecting the internal revenue; and, if he got a bad man in office, it would be his fault, and he should be held accountable for it. The President ought to be able to say to all comers with respect to internal revenue appointments, that he was not collecting the revenue; that was not his business; that it was the business of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue; and that that officer is the proper person to apply to."

"But how would you manage the politicians?" a bystander asked.

"I should give the Senators and Representatives in the Republican States certain offices, and, if they made bad selections, it would be a matter which they would have to settle with their constituents; but the main principle should be observed, that the Cabinet officers are responsible for the duties of their departments. And there should be clerical force enough at the White House, too, to answer every letter that is received. The writer should be told where his letter has gone, if it has been referred, and should be informed immediately that his request cannot be granted, if there is no intention of giving him favorable consideration. There ought to be decisions in these matters. The applicant who was refused would get mad in the first instance, of course, but he would not be half as mad as he would to wait for six months and then be refused.

"There is another kind of business that ought to be discontinued about the White House—that is, these receptions. They are a humbug. They are an imitation of monarchy. They simply convert the President of the United States into a pump, and give everybody a chance to take a jerk at the handle."

Princess Beatrice.

London Letter to Buffalo Courier.

Speaking of royalty, I may mention that Princess Beatrice has come before the public as an authoress. She has published a "birthday" book—just the kind of book that rich and generous English people like to give away at Christmas time. The birthday book proves that she possesses some talent for design and that her tastes in poetry is simple and unaffected. The book consists, in the first place, of twelve colored pictures of flowers. January has her snowdrops, February her yellow crocuses, March her primrose, and October his colored berries. The flowers are perfectly drawn, and with each garland is framed a scrap of verse from one or more of the poets. The rest of the volume consists of empty pages. This young woman leads one of the most monotonous and humdrum lives it is possible to think of. Though five-and-twenty, she is never allowed to leave her mother's apron string. It is rare she even gets to a state or concert, and to a theatre hardly ever. There is no English nobleman who will have her for a wife. The young scions of English noble houses have had a lesson from the Marquis of Lorne, and there is no German prince rich enough to wed her. The Queen, it is true, has plenty of money to dower her; she is known to have £30,000,000 well invested, but like other miserly people, she is unwilling to part with any of it while she lives. It is true she has other children beside her youngest daughter—she has seven others alive, all, except the eldest, needing her pecuniary aid, besides thirty grandchildren and two more expected about Christmas time, not to mention her cousins, whom she numbers up by dozens, and her aunts; at her death she will require to provide for most of these. It is stated by others, however, that the reason the Princess does not marry is, not that she cannot get a husband, but that for political reasons she must stay with her mother. It is alleged that now and then the Queen becomes very eccentric, and it takes all the Princess and John Brown can do to keep her right. Hence the Government will not allow the Princess to marry. If this be true it says much both for the filial feelings and patriotism of the young lady—that she will efface herself for her mother and her country.

Sad Fate of a Criminal's Family.

From the Leavenworth (Kas.) Times, Dec 10.

The readers of the Times will remember that during the Platte City fair last fall the details of a terrible stabbing affray were published. The substance of the report was that Clay Snell, a young man of good family, had stabbed and killed a young man named Nathan Andrews. As the prisoner is in jail awaiting trial, little can be said about the merits or demerits of the case. There is one fact, however, that is too terrible to be suppressed, and that is the death of the entire family of the Snells. Shortly after the murder Mrs. Lucy Ann Standiford, mother of Clay Snell, became much excited over the murder and grew ill. Within a short time she died. Then Robert Snell became ill, from what is supposed to be the same cause, and after a lingering sickness, during which time he talked constantly of the family trouble, he passed away, soon followed by his little six-months old baby. John Snell, another brother, succumbed to the strain of family excitement, and after a short illness died. Within the last three days a telegram was received in this city by Mr. Shackleford announcing the death of Miss Nettie Snell, the last but one of the family of one blood. It was ascertained yesterday afternoon that a seven-year-old half-brother of Clay Snell, Thomas Standiford, is not expected to live. Clay Snell, who is the only survivor of the unfortunate family, is now in jail at Platte City, awaiting trial for the murder of Andrews. He takes the death of the various members of his family much to heart. When his mother was buried it is said that he begged permission to attend the funeral, saying: "Send a hundred men to guard me; cover me with chains, locked; but, for God's sake, let me see the last of my poor old mother." He was not permitted to go.

New Style Apple Jelly.

From the New York Journal of Commerce.

As the juice ran fresh from the apples, before it could begin to ferment, it was conducted in a pipe to a large open evaporating pan over a rude brick furnace. The cider flowed steadily in a stream into one end of the pan, which was some ten or twelve feet long, meandered through the compartments, boiled as it progressed and foamed up at the further end, where it was drawn off and poured into clean new wooden tubs and pails (made on the spot), and became a clear, solid claret-colored jelly, without addition of sugar or anything else. It is a method of utilizing cider, reducing it to a form which well repays long transportation to market, and adds to the city table a luxury fully equal to expensive jellies at a very low price. The jelly is sold at the factory for about a dollar a gallon in the package. This is a simpler, cheaper and more remunerative as well as more useful product of apples than cider brandy, and I marvel now at the vast orchards loaded with fruit, which I saw two years ago and this year in New Hampshire rotting, ungathered because it would not pay to pick them. They told me at this cider-mill that they were paying eight to twelve cents a bushel for apples delivered at the mill. The most accessible railway station is eighteen miles distant, at Shelburne Falls, in Massachusetts. I recommend apple jelly made without sugar or gelatine as a capital addition to good mutton.

A Phantom Boat.

Providence (R. I.) Special to Chicago Tribune.

Capt. Bird, of the schooner Frank Norton, at Dutch Island Harbor, reports an experience as weird in its events and as ominous in the possible fate of six of his fellow-beings as any on the pages of romance. The Frank Norton was bound from Rockland, Me., to Philadelphia. Saturday night was very dark, and the wind blew strong from the northwest. Terrific hurricanes have swept the Atlantic for nearly a month, and something of their power was to be seen in the heavy sea running. At 11 o'clock at night the vessel was thirteen miles east-northeast of Thatcher's Island Capt. Bird was at the wheel when a large yawl-boat was made out. As it bore down upon the schooner it was seen that there were six men in it. The yawl was abreast of the Norton's chain plates when one of the men in her hailed the schooner. He said they were a shipwrecked crew, and that they wanted to be taken on board the schooner. Capt. Bird at once put the helm down, and kept off to leeward, with the intent that the men in the boat should bear down upon him. The minutes wore into hours, and darkness faded into gray dawn, and no trace was seen of the boat. Sunday morning came, but no boat was visible from the schooner as far as a glass could sweep the seas. The Norton was then, at 8 o'clock, put on her course. The fate of the men is shrouded in mystery. It is scarcely possible they could have misunderstood the maneuver of the schooner, but they may have been unable to reach her, or may have been engulfed in the high seas.

Woman's Exchange in New York.

Letter in Chicago Inter-Ocean.

I must mention the Woman's Exchange here, which is now accepted as an established success. Only three years old, and starting with but ten consignors, it now has 2,250. The sales this year amount to $26,535,37, an increase of $5,000 over last year. With all expenses paid, and without debt, $6,000 has been put in the bank toward the building fund, and, encouraged by the example of the parent society, nine others have been started in different cities.

Few people have any idea of the amount of good accomplished through the Exchange. Only the other day I came across a young girl, rendered a cripple by a painful accident, and unable to move from her chair, who supported herself by making pure molasses candy, which is sold in the restaurant attached to the three rooms of the Exchange. Another instance is found in an English lady reduced by misfortune to poverty, who supplies all orders for English plum-pudding, and dresses herself from the proceeds. There are very few women in the world deprived of the gift of doing some one thing well; and, whether it consists of making good gingerbread, a set of baby clothes, painting a screen, or carving a piano, she can find an opportunity to make profitable use of it here.

Close of the Electrical Exhibition.

Paris Dispatch to London Daily Telegraph.

The Electrical Exhibition, which finally closed its doors last night, is estimated to have produced a net profit of £16,000, and Messrs. Siemens' tramway, running from the building to the Place de la Concorde, has conveyed no fewer than 84,000 passengers during the three months it has been running. An immense crowd besieged the Palais de l'Industrie yesterday, admission being free. In the evening, when the exhibition was illuminated for the last time, there was scarcely standing room either in the main hall or the galleries, most of the visitors being of the artisan class out for their weekly holiday. The usual custom of closing exhibitions by a general letting loose of all the noisy elements contained in the show was observed on this occasion with an almost deafening effect. Shortly before 11 the whistles of all the steam engines and every electric bell in the building were set going, making such an inharmonious din as was certainly never heard before. Fortunately for the hearing powers of the audience, it only lasted a few minutes, and had the desired effect of clearing the palace of its thousands of visitors.

Puts and Calls.

New York Cor. Cincinnati Gazette.

This method of gambling is more popular than ever. It is, indeed, the neatest and most facile of all stock jobbing, and since the latter is merely a matter of risk, the put and the call concentrate that risk in the most tangible shape. The crude idea seems to be two men, each armed with a hot poker. One exclaims, "You may burn me for $10," to which the other replies, "Give me $10 and I'll take my chance of being burnt." There are a dozen houses dealing in puts and calls, but the leader in this specialty is Russell Sage. He has made it immensely profitable, or, in other words, he burns others ten times to his getting burnt himself. Sage has a wonderful power of calculation, and seems endowed with a special tact in accepting risks. It is all one to him whether you put a stock to him or call one from him. Give him his fee and you can do as you please. Whatever be your choice, the chances are in favor of his making it pay. He and Jay Gould have offices in the same building, but Sage is always open during business hours, while Gould is always closed. He wants no callers, since seclusion may be necessary to safety. Sage's office is often crowded; each one takes his turn. The book-keeper has his daily schedule and makes out puts and calls as the demand may require, while the dealers lay down their checks, which are closely scanned as they are passed in. "That check's not certified—can't take it," is the brief reply occasionally uttered. Sage wants his money in solid shape, and the cashier will in this manner take in $75,000 before 3 o'clock. At another desk the settlements are made, and lucky owners of puts and calls hand in their papers and receive checks for the difference. All this is done as silently as possible, for Sage is not a talker and no waste words are wanted in his office. When the Stock Board is at its highest excitement Sage walks round and passes an hour in the whirl and confusion of that tremendous tumult, and then returns to his quiet office unmoved by the excitement through which he has passed. He makes up his bank account, and may find himself $5,000 richer than he was in the morning. For this he devoutly returns thanks (for he is pious) and then he goes home—the same routine being repeated every day. Sage has a regular set of customers, who keep bringing puts and calls till their money is gone, and then they disappear and new faces fill up the vacancy.

From Altar to Tomb.

Latrobe (Pa.) Special Dispatch.

Mrs. Belle Karns, the daughter of Clerk of Courts Bell, of Westmoreland county, was instantly killed by the Johnstown express at this place about 5 o'clock last evening. She had just been married to Robert Karns, Esq., a few hours before, and the newly-wedded pair were starting out on their wedding tour. They had to change cars at this place, and came out on the platform together. The husband stepped back into the car for a moment, and his wife stepped or fell off the platform immediately in front of the express, which was coming up on the next track. Her husband came up a moment later, in time to see the mangled body of hi bride strewn along the track. He fainte with terror, and has been delirious eve since. It is thought his mind will be permanently deranged.

Messrs. Allen & Blaisdell, the iron-boat builders of Carondelet, have received a big contract from New Orleans parties. They are full of business.

Will S. Hayes, of Louisville, will be in this city to-morrow. He is coming over to pay his respects to the St. Louis Anchor Line people and others. Hayes has dedicated a new song to Capt. Jas. O'Neal.

The grand steamer City of New Orleans is now on berth at the Anchor Line wharfboat, and may be seen by those who wish to visit her. She leaves for New Orleans to-morrow. Capt. Wm. H. Blake is still confined at his home in Cote Brilliante by an illness that has pursued him for more than a year, during which time he has borne his suffering with a fortitude that has won for him the affection of all who are familiar with his case. On Sundays the Captain is always visited by friends, who endeavor to cheer him by their presence and conversation, and encourage him to keep in courage, and he may yet regain his wonted strength and activity. There never was a more popular commander on the Mississippi than Capt. Blake, and his many friends will hail with joy the day he returns to his old calling.

Buz says: "An old-timer has signed his last bill of lading and retired from a life on the ocean wave and is now engaged in agricultural pursuits. I've been thar, and know mighty well what I'm talking about when I sing out, 'Billy managed wisely the financial affairs last season of a Memphis and Cincinnati packet, and when she laid up was well gaffed, but it is an extremely difficult thing to teach an old dog new tricks, and that an ancient mariner will never make a sure-enough farmer. He will always be a cropper. See if he don't.'" At Memphis C. B. Bryan & Co., the coal dealers have reduced the price of Pittsburg coal to steamers to 40 cents per box.

Pittsburg, December 14.—The Wyoming arrived and the Carrier departed. The Wyoming will be the next boat out for St. Louis, leaving on Saturday. Capt. Jno. Littrell is here from Louisville. Wm. Wilson (colored), who was porter on the steamer Buckeye State, was convicted yesterday on a charge of stealing a satchel from a passenger on the Buckeye State and sentenced to two years in the Work-house. Wilson is said to be a resident of Cincinnati. Towboats will commence leaving to-morrow with coal, and it is probable that about all that is loaded will get out on the present freshet. Negotiations are pending here for the purchase of the steamer Bright Light. The main trouble is the delay in getting the loaded and other craft through Lock No. 1. There are now twenty tugs with tows of empties waiting their turn to get up, and hundreds of loaded craft equally anxious to get down. The harbor here is comparatively clear of towboats, and they will delay shipments. It is safe to say that a million bushels of coal will get out anyhow.

David R. Powell.—This is the name of a large and elegant sidewheel steamer just completed here by the Belle of St. Louis Transportation Company for the Missouri River trade in place of the Belle St. Louis. The boat was built under the immediate superintendence of Capt. E. W. Gould, who has been prominently connected with river commerce for the past forty years, during which time he has constructed scores of steamers, famous in their day, and his last effort shows that he is still up to the times or in advance of them in building boats that meet all the requirements of Western river commerce. The David R. Powell's hull was constructed at Cincinnati by the Marine Railway Company, and is 265 feet long by 38 feet beam and 8 feet depth of hold. She will carry 1,500 tons and has capacity for one hundred passengers. She has a beautiful model and ample power to make her very fast. Her cabin is finely furnished and elegantly furnished, and in all that goes to make up a complete freight and passenger steamer she takes rank with the very best. She is commanded by Capt. R. J. Whitledge, who is well and favorably known as the manager for many years of the Star Line. E. W. Gould, Jr., has charge of the office.

The joiner work was done by Mr. J. D. Lawnin, painting by Mullen & Hoppins. The outfit and furniture were all supplied by St. Louis houses. As will be seen the steamer is named after one of St. Louis' most prominent business men, a gentleman who for the past twenty years had been closely identified with the commerce of the city as well as the valley generally, and who from his sterling qualities of head and heart has so won upon the affections of the people that all will agree Capt. Gould's choice was not only good, but that no other name could be substituted that would meet with equal unanimity and spontaneous confirmation.

The public are cautioned to ask for Dr. Bull's Cough Syrup, and take no other. Price 25 cents.

Sending a Clergyman to Prison.

From the Manchester Examiner.

At the Westminster (London) Police Court yesterday, Jeremiah Murphy, aged 38, a clerk in holy orders, was charged on remand with stealing from Victoria Station, Pimlico, four books of the value of 5s, the property of W. H. Smith & Sons. He was stopped with the books after leaving the stall, and then he said that he could find no one to pay the money to, but when searched he had only 2s 3d in his pocket. An assistant from Mr. Sutton, pawnbroker, Stockbridge Terrace, Pimlico, said that he believed the prisoner was a man who pledged a book which had been missed from the stall after the prisoner had been seen there on a previous occasion. A Detective Sergeant of the D Division proved that on the 7th inst. the prisoner was charged at Marylebone with unlawfully possessing a pair of nut-crackers, and remanded for four days, and then discharged. Mr. D'Eyncourt said he could have no doubt as to the guilt of the accused. He deeply regretted that a man of such position and ability should have been led into temptation. He sentenced the prisoner to two months' imprisonment, with hard labor.

All business or news letters or telegrams should be addressed POST-DISPATCH, 111 North Fifth street.

The POST-DISPATCH has a LARGER CITY CIRCULATION, on each day of publication, than ANY OTHER PAPER published in St. Louis. Advertisers are at all times welcome to call and satisfy themselves of the strict accuracy of this claim.

MR. BLAINE'S essay on the CLAYTON-BULWER treaty is almost as interesting as a parchment taken from the vest pocket of an Egyptian mummy.

THE Chief of Police of Washington City writes that he can't attend the convention of his brethren in Chicago because Congress is in session. This seems to be a libel by innuendo.

THERE should be no repeal of the ordinance prohibiting drinking saloons in the immediate neighborhood of the public parks. Council should be given an opportunity to test the public mind on this question.

MR. GUITEAU made it very pleasant for the witnesses and the lawyers on the other side yesterday. If he would pull off his coat occasionally and sail in and chastise his persecutors he would add materially to the attractiveness of COX'S Circus.

IT seems to be Mr. ARTHUR'S policy to fill up his Stalwart Cabinet very slowly. By appointing his ministers one at a time he gives the public mind a chance to rally. The shock would be too great if the thing fell upon the country in all its completeness.

MR. BANCROFT DAVIS, who has been appointed Assistant Secretary of State, is a sort of professional diplomat. He has been hanging around the State Department for years, and nearly all the important State papers that appeared during the GRANT regime emanated from his facile quill.

IT is the special desire of the President that Mr. BEN H. BREWSTER should discharge the duties of Attorney-General and word to that effect was sent to the Senate to-day Mr. B., like his able predecessor, is also a Pennsylvania legal luminary.

THE admirers of JOHN LOGAN have started his sickly Presidential boom by presenting him with a cane made from the stern davits of the old war-frigate "Constitution." As a testimonial to his ignorance a few of the stern sheets of the Constitution of the United States would have been a more appropriate gift.

THERE seems to be a determination on the part of the enemies of Col. CRISP to destroy the political usefulness of that distinguished gentleman. Not long ago he was forced to answer to a charge of murder down in Texas and now he has been indicted by a grand jury for stealing turkeys. The frivolity of these charges shows to what base uses a grand jury can be put.

THE venerable Stalwart, A. M. CLAPP, who was Public Printer in the flush days of the GRANT Administration, is making a desperate effort to get his nose into the public trough again. A newspaper correspondent speaks of his face as "a sign of mendicancy and sycophancy" and describes him as "crawling around Washington like a mud-turtle trying to find some place to bask."

MRS. LANGTRY, the professional English beauty, has made a decided hit at the Haymarket Theater, London. At least that's what the newspapers say, but the newspapers are very partial to handsome ladies. The talented society rosebud appeared in the fine old standard comedy, "She Stoops to Conquer." When she comes over to this country she will stoop to make some money.

THE remaining members of the ragged BONAPARTE family are gradually realizing on their assets. Prince ROLAND has just sold his interest in the gambling tables of Monaco for the very neat little sum of $4,600,000 in hard cash. With this sum he can go into an honorable retirement and dream over the Napoleonic idea. The ex Empress is reorganizing her mournful mimic court in England, wherein the throne room is a sepulchre. The remainder of the family, the weak barnacles who clustered around the floating raft of Bonapartism, are hard at work in a puny effort to undermine the French Republic and succeeding only in accumulating the contempt of the people they wish to govern. There are four other families in Europe that must sooner or later go the same road, the HOHENZOLLERNS, the HAPSBURGS, the BOURBONS and the GUELPHS. They are living now simply by the force of a habit acquired by the people in dark and ignorant times, and the habit can not last always.

SINCE the burning of the Ring-Theater in Vienna there has been the usual spasmodic movement in behalf of securing public places of amusement against the danger of fires and panics. A thorough investigation of all the theaters in New York has been ordered. It is certainly well enough to see that all buildings of this character are provided with broad stairways, doors that open outward and abundant water service, but the fact must not be lost sight of that no amount of preparation can prevent a large audience from inflicting damage upon itself in the event of a senseless panic. If there were 500 exits to a theater it would be impossible to empty the place of a panic-stricken crowd without somebody being trampled to death. The greatest danger in all theaters comes to the people in the upper tiers. In case of fire all the heat and smoke rushes to the top of the house. The gallery people choke up the exits and are in turn choked and suffocated themselves. It was so in the Brooklyn theater fire and in the recent terrible disaster in Vienna. Our St. Louis theaters are probably as well supplied with fire apparatus and modes of egress as any in the country.

A CONVOCATION of Police Chiefs of the United States is being held in Chicago. The object of the meeting is to bring about a better acquaintance and understanding among the police commanders and to devise ways and means for the better suppression of the criminal classes. This ought to be followed by a National Convention of Police Commissioners for mutual improvement and instruction in the art of suppressing gambling.

THE other day the National Temperance Society was guilty of the foolishness of petitioning Congress in behalf of a national prohibition law. It is sad to think that the zeal of the temperance people is constantly bringing a good cause into ridicule and contempt. Everybody knows that Congress has no business to engage in such legislation as this and everybody knows that no such law, in the shape of a constitutional amendment, could ever get through that body. If it did the States would not ratify it. It is the business of the States to regulate the liquor traffic and to punish and restrain intemperate men. Congress might as well be asked to put a stop to cigarette smoking, tobacco-chewing and other unclean habits as to be petitioned for a national prohibition law. The Government encourages the manufacture of ale, beer and spirits and derives a handsome revenue from the business. If the temperance people believe in the ability of Congress to stop the drinking of liquors they must also believe in the right of that body to stop the manufacture of intoxicating compounds. Why not strike at the root of the business?

Mr. Loring MOODY, of the Institute of Heredity, in New York, is engaged in establishing a school wherein boys and girls are to be trained in the proper methods of selecting companions for life. The Society of Heredity is a body of gentlemen who have become seriously alarmed at the degeneration of the human race and who have adopted resolutions to put the brakes on. They have conned over the situation and have come to the conclusion that the only practical thing to do is to train boys and girls so that they will make the best possible selections of wives and husbands. In BULWER LYTTON'S fantasy, "The Coming Race," the relations of the sexes are regulated by law. The sciences of phrenology, physiognomy and psychology are all appealed to to determine which two people had better marry. Nearly the same principles obtain in the Society of Heredity. As each of these divisions of knowledge are to a very considerable extent pseudo sciences, results built upon them are quite liable to be false in theory and vicious in practice. Mr. MOODY'S school is likely to result in failure. It is a serious experiment and deserves to be considered seriously, but it also has its humorous side. The wise process of Nature, natural selection and the survival of the fittest have built up the world. The modern hand will not fit into the sword-hilts found in the Irish bogs, the modern heads cannot be encased in the helmets discovered at Marathon and Leuctra. The race has achieved more brain-work, muscle and more bone simply by the let alone process. On the other hand, suppose a boy is taught to pick out the best possible girl for himself, and then suppose some other fellow has already tangled the young lady's affections? Suppose that Miss A. has demonstrated that Mr. B. ought to marry her and yet Mr. B. knows he will be sued for breach of promise if he does? Suppose Mr. X. and Miss Y. have the whole matter fixed up when old man Y. comes into the parlor and kicks X. all over the premises and warns him that he will freckle him all over with buckshot if he comes around again? Suppose, too, that Mr. N. was ready to marry and, taking down his text book on heredity, went to figuring on the relative fitness of Miss P. and Miss Q. for the situation, does any one imagine that if Mr. N. was mercenary and Miss P.'s papa was a newspaper man with several millions saved up, that that fact would not figure in the calculation? And again, if Mr. F. ought to marry Miss H., and Miss H. ought to marry Mr. G., what is the Society of Heredity going to do about it? Looking at this matter by and large we incline to the opinion that the best way to select a wife is the old one—buying her ice cream and sealskin sacques and things. If the Society of Heredity would get up a class in flirtation and publish a new lovers' letter-writer, we might indorse them, but under the circumstances we feel called upon to ask for a suspension of public opinion until some of the children are exhibited.

IF we get into war with the insolent Chili, and build a navy, and levy an army, and charter an immense transport fleet to carry on war in that country, and at last fetch her to terms, how are we going to get satisfaction? —Cincinnati Gazette.

We can seize all the real estate in Chili, according to the modern ethics, and rent the place out for an ostrich farm. In a war of this kind our contractors would all get rich and the poor people could fill themselves up with glory. The war, we think, would be very popular.

THE Democracy, as represented in Congress, should not make a noise about financial questions; but they will. They are about to precipitate themselves upon Sherman, and will find themselves at a disadvantage.—Cincinnati Commercial.

Perhaps the poor Democrats would do well to confine themselves to the task of estimating the cost of Mr. SHERMAN'S candle lunch and to investigating the size of the mechanics' lien which the United States holds on that Washington mansion which was partially built by Government labor.

PERSONAL.

—The music at Beecher's church last year cost $5,720.

—Oscar Wilde has shaken the lily, and now appears carrying a fern.

—An arithmetic man finds that at a recent concert Mme. Albani was paid at the rate of twenty-six cents a note. She gets more for a slur than a critic does.

—Mr. Oscar Wilde has postponed the production of his drama of "Vera, or the Nihilists," in view of the state of political feeling on the subject just now.

—MacLeod, of MacLeod, is an eccentric Briton, who lately arrived at Nice with some remarkable traveling companions—two huge cats, each one accompanied by a personal attendant.

—Persons having sympathy to spare should bestow it upon England, where Edward Payson Weston, the pedestrian, has established a reign of terror in the rural districts. He is lecturing.

—The New York "masher" is at last the subject of a police order. When a lady appeals to a policeman for protection the "masher" is collared and chucked along the street to the station-house.

—It is hardly complimentary to Senator Burnside's successor in the Senate, now standing, figuratively, in the General's old shoes, that at a sale of the Burnside effects the actual old shoes went for half a dollar.

—Mr. Elmer, of the Post-office Department, says that no Western or Southern Congressman has yet complained of the cutting down of the Star Routes. But it is believed that there have been sporadic cases of silent agony.

—Count von Moltke, who is now in his eighty-second year, is out of health, and talks of retiring from his post of Chief of the German Staff. He will, however, continue to exercise a general supervision over the working of the Army Staff.

—Mr. Damit lives in Illinois. He was recently called for by a crowd for a speech, and a stranger in town who heard the call thought the supply of rum in town must have given out, and asked when the next train left.—[Boston Post.

—Dr. Stroussberg, the once famous railway king and bankrupt, has been busy in retrieving his shattered fortunes with street railways and cheap newspapers in Berlin, and has regained the confidence of capitalists, which he seems never to have entirely forfeited. His latest enterprise aims at the construction of the long-planned Euphrates railway. He has secured all the necessary contracts and is now raising the required funds.

Important Medical Information.

ST. LOUIS, December 11, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Will you please inform me through the columns of your paper what the first symptoms of small pox are, also what necessary care should a usually healthy person take to prevent taking the dreaded disease.

The above subject is one that at present is agitating a great many minds and a good, clear understanding would be of incalculable benefit to them. Very respectfully,

J. P. DOUGLASS.

[The premonitory symptoms of small-pox are headache, pain in the back and a general feverish condition of the system. Get thoroughly vaccinnated, keep your liver in good order and don't stay out late o' nights.—ED. P.-D.]

A Public Benefactor.

ST. LOUIS, December 16, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Will you oblige one of your constant readers by letting him know through the columns of your valuable paper who is Citizen Fink; what business he is in, if any?

JOHN WILSON,
1315 Olive street.

[Mr. Fink is a retired bondholder, and he has no business save that of looking after the welfare of the city of St. Louis. He boards himself.—ED. P.-D.]

Best in the Business.

From the Fulton (Mo.) Telegraph.

The POST-DISPATCH of the 7th was printed on its new Hoe Perfecting Press in its new building on Market street. The new press prints both sides of the paper at the same time, cuts it, folds it four times and pastes it at the rate of 15,000 an hour. This new acquisition is a substantial evidence of its prosperity. It is the best evening paper ever printed in St. Louis.

"Western in His Manners."

From the Chicago Times.

The New York Tribune describes Mr. Speaker Keifer as "Western in his manners." This is probably intended as a compliment from the paper now edited by Mr. Reid, recently of Ohio, and edited a few weeks ago by Mr. John Hay, born in Illinois.

Same as in St. Louis.

From the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

What Chicago wants is 400 more policemen, and the saloons should be taxed to pay their salaries. If it were not for the saloons the present police force would be sufficient.

A Funny Idea.

From the Chicago Times.

If the United States hang up Assassin Guiteau's stockings at Christmas, it will probably not neglect to have him in them.

A Favorite With Grant.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

Mr. Frelinghuysen, the Secretary of State, was offered the English Mission by Gen. Grant, but declined.

SHE SEWED THE BUTTONS ON.

A Private Detective Fined $100 in the First District Police Court.

James McDonough, the rotund ex-Chief of Police and Henry Huthsing, an ex-detective, opened a detective agency a few weeks ago, and this morning Herbert A. Glenny, who represented himself as an employe of the agency, was arraigned in the First District Police Court on a charge of representing himself as an officer. In making the arrest Officer Dan Walsh did not believe the man was what he represented himself to be. Florence Eastwood, who lives at No. 16 South Seventh street, testified that the defendant went into the house three nights in succession and apparently without any object. Another girl testified that she sewed up his coat and sewed some buttons on.

"Did you do this on account of his supposed official position?" asked Mr. Erskine.

"I did."

The defendant testified that the badge, a five-pronged star, on which was cut "H. A. Glenny, private," was bought by him in Cincinnati while he was with a circus. He found it in a valise and put it on last Sunday. He visited the house, but not on business. He said he was employed by Mr. Huthsing for McDonough & Huthsing's detective agency. Mr. Huthsing, he said, had told him that he would arrange the license immediately. He paid no further attention to it. He had no witnesses, and was fined $100.

THE RAILWAYS.

A New Road Building From Decatur to St. Louis.

Pushing a New Line to New Orleans—General News.

To-day is the date fixed for the meeting of the general passenger agents at the Pacific Hotel in Chicago for the purpose of suppressing the payment of commissions to ticket agents. Almost a hundred and fifty roads will be represented, and only half a dozen lines are known to be opposed to the movement. Among the latter are the Erie, Grand Trunk, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio, and the Rock Island. This difference of opinion will, it is thought, make naught the work of the convention, although it may be attempted to force a revolution through ordering the tickets of non-conforming roads off sale until they came into the combination. The lay reader will understand that the commission trouble has been growing largely of late and has become a serious drain upon the revenue of all the roads. Ticket agents of course work on salary for their own roads, but each officer keeps the tickets of other roads on sale, and as agents are only human, in spite of the frequently expressed belief to the contrary, they are naturally more enthusiastic over the virtues and excellencies of a commission-paying route than upon one which declines to tempt the cupidity of the agent.

The Chicago Bureau of Freight Inspection, recently established by the Western roads, has issued a circular of instruction to local freight agents, which will affect St. Louis freight. The circular reads:

Our attention having been called to the growing practice of shippers in misrepresenting the contents of packages for the purpose of obtaining a lower classification than would otherwise be charged, you are hereby instructed to use every effort to arrive at the actual contents of all packages offered you for shipment and properly classify and rate the same.

To this end you are authorized and directed, whenever you have reason to believe the contents of packages are not correctly stated on shipping tickets, to open the same, and if found to contain any property the classification and rate upon which is higher than stated on the dray ticket, to charge the proper rate therefore, and in case the packages contain property of different classification, to charge the classification and rate of the highest classified article in said package or packages.

In all cases where the contents of packages are found to be misrepresented receiving clerks will change the shipping ticket so as to describe the contents as found.

A record will be kept by you of all packages the contents of which are found to have been misrepresented, such record to show date, shipper, consignee and destination, and a full description of the property as described by the shipping ticket as changed by you.

When it becomes necessary under these instructions to open these packages, receiving clerks must be given to understand that they must be in position to testify under oath if necessary that the contents of packages have not been disturbed, and that such packages leave your station containing all the property they contained when delivered, and in like condition. These instructions will apply alike to local shipments and to property received from connecting lines.

For the purpose of carrying out and making more efficacious these instructions, the undersigned have established an "Inspection Bureau," with Mr. J. R. Wheeler as Chief Inspector. Mr. Wheeler will employ such deputy inspectors as he may find necessary for the proper supervision of your station, and you will fully co-operate with him in carrying out these instructions.

Mr. J. W. Midgely, Commissioner of the Southwestern Railway Association, has just issued the following circular: "At a meeting of the directors of the Indiana, Bloomington and Western Railroad, held yesterday in Chicago, it was determined to extend the Indianapolis, Decatur and Springfield road, just acquired by lease, from Decatur to St. Louis. The surveys and construction work will be pushed with all possible dispatch. The road is almost an air-line, 110 miles long, and the cost of construction will be about $22,000 a mile. Arrangements are already making for terminal facilities in East St. Louis and it is said the road also means to put an extension into Kansas City. This determination of the I., B. and W. is not a sudden one, but was finally decided upon when the negotiations in progress between that line and the Chicago and Alton failed."

Dallas is to be hereafter the center of the Gould system in Texas.

That all is not lovely between the Cairo and St. Louis boys and the Paramore system the following communication from one of the former testifies: "Although it has not been definitely settled as to the case of the Cairo and St. Louis Railroad to the Paramore system, it is said that a general decapitation will take place when the same has been effected; in fact the names of the new officers have already been mentioned, and at least two of them, who have been inspecting public buildings for some time, have already taken a trip over the Cairo and St. Louis Road to examine the scene of their possible future operations. The idea prevails in the general offices of the C. & St. L., as it is known that should Mr. Parramore take hold there will be no heads to take off, as the present officers have already better positions to go to when the change takes effect. The new Narrow Gauge men, cut down from broad-gauge material, will then exclaim, 'The field is ours; the unwelcome crowd is gone.'"

The New Orleans branch of the Iron Mountain has at last been built out of Knobel, on the Black River, over the swamps, and construction will now be rapidly pushed towards Alexandria on the New Orleans and Pacific. This is a most important line, 400 miles long, and when built will be the shortest and quickest route between here and the Crescent City. The road is covered with graders as far south as Forest City, and Mr. Hoxie has been telegraphed that after the 21st instant the rate of construction will be a mile a day.

A circular has just been received at the Vandalia office which will be of some interest to the great and noble army of deadhead travelers who make life a burden to the poor railroad man. It is a notification that upon all the lines controlled by the Pennsylvania Association no family passes shall hereafter be issued; annuals shall not include more than two persons; trip passes must state the number of persons passed; exchange passes will only be issued to important connections; no special car will be permitted to pass free without an order from the president, the first vice-president or the general manager of the road.

Mr. H. M. Hoxie is feeling particularly good to-day over the completion of the road into Laredo and the beginning of work in the Republic of Mexico. It is not known how fast the construction in the sister republic can be pressed, as a great many unforeseen obstacles may arise, but the day is not far distant when through cars to the City of Mexico will be leaving St. Louis over the Iron Mountain Road.

On the 1st of January through sleepers will be put on the Iron Mountain between St. Louis and El Paso. The time cards are now being arranged by the general manager.

The new time card of the Vandalia has at last been definitely decided upon. It goes into effect on Sunday next. The limited express will leave here at 8 a. m. and arrive in New York at 7:30 p. m. next day, passing through Indianapolis at 4:30 p. m. the first day. This train beats the former schedule time one hour into Indianapolis and two hours and a half into New York. The evening train leaves St. Louis at 7 p. m., arriving at New York at 9 a. m. on the second day, a gain on the present time of the road of one hour and a half. Contrary to the report printed in this and other papers, the time of the Effingham train is not changed. It will leave here at 3 o'clock as usual, and it will not run into Indianapolis.

The connection between the New Orleans Pacific and the balance of the Texas Pacific system is now perfect between Shreveport and New Orleans, where the trouble has hitherto been.

RAILWAY PERSONALS.

Capt. E. A. Ford, the general passenger agent of the Vandalia, is due in St. Louis to-day.

Mr. John C. Gault, of the Wabash, is still detained in Chicago. He was expected home this morning.

Mr. James Charlton, the general passenger agent of the Chicago and Alton, has just lost a son by the typhoid fever.

"MOVE ON!"

The Police Issue That Order to the Keepers of Disreputable Houses.

The police are carrying on a vigorous prosecution against disreputable houses on prominent streets running east and west, and are determined to drive them to less public thoroughfares. The neighbors are informed of their rights, and they usually know enough to secure conviction. This morning Mrs. Kieth, of 1121 Pine street, was docketed on this charge in the First District Police court. The testimony of a neighbor was that women came there from dark until 10 o'clock and men from 10 p. m. to 2 a. m.

"How did the women accost you? asked Col. Claiborne, for the defense, of one of the witnesses."

"What! They asked me to come in and stay awile."

"What did you say?"

"I lived next door, and I said I thought I was pretty much at home then."

Officer Hogan said his attention had been attracted to the house. The reputation of the inmates was bad. Another witness said men had frequently called at his door and asked for Minnie, Maude, Jennie and similar names. When the case was submitted City Attorney Erskine said the object of the prosecution was to cause her to remove, and that a fine might be assessed and stayed to give her an opportunity to leave the neighborhood. No defense was made and on consideration of the testimony a fine of $100 was imposed, and a stay of execution for six days granted.

'CHANGE NOTES.

The Visible Supply—Jim Keene and Wheat—What Cotton Did.

There is no denying Crozier's right to a military title. He was christened "Colonel."

Private cables reported a better tone to wheat, with no prospect for further supplies from Egypt.

Minnesota mills are turning out very little flour. This is not, as the bulls claim, caused by a scarcity of wheat, but is due to a scarcity of orders for the manufactured goods.

The visible supply of grain for December 10, is 18,503,725 bu. wheat, 18,399,904 corn, 2,719,017 oats, 1,232,041 rye, 3,124,265 barley. This is a decrease of 373,000 bu. wheat, 418,000 corn and 100,000 oats from the preceding week.

Whether December oats are "cornered" or not here, the fact remains that there are a large number of contracts out that the shorts would like to cover, while the stock in store is very small and held by one or two parties. One short paid 48c yesterday to get out of some of his contracts.

There is talk on the floor of a deal in January and February corn in this market. Nearly all the short contracts for these options are said to be held by one firm that, too, controls nearly all the cash there is in store here. These months are also said to be largely over-sold, and the firm already so heavily long continues to buy all there is offered.

This is a Stove-pipe Hat. How Glorious it looks Sailing 'round the Floor. Is there anything in the Stove-pipe Hat? No, there is Nothing in the Stove-pipe Hat. What does the Stove-pipe Hat Carry 'round the Floor? Oh, that is a Call Board Operator it carries 'round the Floor. Can you see the Call Board Operator? No, but I know Him by his Feet.

Ed. Samuel was introduced to the French visitors when they were on 'Change the other day, and he had then an opportunity of rubbing up his French, which he has not had occasion to use since he left Paris. He occasionally drops into that language now, in a moment of absent-mindedness, and it is no rare thing to hear him shout: "At five-eighths and four corn of the January five buy I will."

Some of the shorts on wheat were worried this morning over a report that Jim Keene was under wheat in Chicago. Several parties wired their Chicago correspondents asking as to the truth of this report and in answer received unqualified denials of it. One well-known Chicago firm telegraphed: "Some of our locals are loaded and anxious to make some one think a deal is being run. We take no stock in it, but think it mainly sympathy with Milwaukee Railroad men all bearish on increased country movement." A local bear, who has been hammering at the market whenever he got the chance, lately remarked, sarcastically: "Well, if Keene makes as brilliant a success of this deal in wheat as he did of his other, why, I say, let him go ahead."

The bulls on cotton stacked themselves up in front of the blackboard at an early hour this morning. They had a dead sure thing on an advance this time. Yes, indeed. Did not the Agricultural Bureau place the crop at 4,900,000, and would those bold, bad bears in New York dare to hold the market down with such a shortage as that staring them in the face? Well, hardly. The click, click of the ticker is heard and the voice of Henry Young sounds through the room—"January 12.12!" There is a gasp of horrified surprise along the line of bulls, and a gratified shout from the bears, who have been keeping themselves scarce. New York is lower. Bob Nicol, Col. Hill, President Senter and other prominent long horns suddenly remember important engagements that will require their presence elsewhere. Col. Norvell, Ru. Magnus, Louis Fallon, Andy Mitchell and the balance of the bears came to the front once more. However, these lower prices were not held, and later there was an advance. Advices from New York state that the feeling there is strong and an advance is looked for.

Run Into by an Engine.

A wagon loaded with bones stalled on the Wabash track at Talcott avenue and Second streets last night. Engine No. 30, of the St. Charles accommodation, collided with the vehicle, scattering bones for a distance of a half a block and demolishing the wagon. The driver and mules escaped uninjured. A. B. Mayer, who owns the wagon, claimed to be damaged $275 by the collision.

VARIETY AND DAGO "DENS."

The Collector is Still Wrestling With the Problem of Reforming Them.

Collector Hudson has done nothing more about the variety "dens" since he refused to renew the license for the New Comique on Monday last. He was then and is still in possession of information from the Police Board to the effect that the Comique, the Crystal Palace and the Alhambra Theater are not places of good reputation, and, acting upon this information, he left Mr. Gropper the proprietor of the Comique, the alternative of either closing up or running his establishment in violation of the law. He has the same information to direct his action in regard to the Crystal Palace and Alhambra. He says he does not wish to foreshadow his action, but leaves it to be inferred that the Eshers and Geo. Fresch will be sent to join "Capt." Decker and Mr. Gropper among the harp-players now loitering around the theatrical throne.

A POST-DISPATCH reporter saw the Collector this morning and asked him what he thought of the depositions taken yesterday in the Comique Police Court case.

"Well," said Mr. Hudson, "some of the testimony is in favor of the theater and some against it. I understand that the depositions are to be presented to me when they are finished, although the papers say they are to be used in a mandamus proceeding."

"What will you do about them?"

"I can't say; they haven't been presented yet."

"Have you made up your mind as to what should be done in the Crystal Palace and Alhambra cases?"

"I don't want to say anything about them yet. I have already closed up two of these theaters and refused another a license. That is sufficient for the present."

"Attorney Claiborne says you expressed yourself in favor, not of closing these establishments, but of tearing them down. How about that?"

"Well, there is no doubt that in a big city like St. Louis there should be some cheap amusement, but the great difficulty is to regulate such theaters."

"What about Anton Vert's license to run a saloon on Spruce street attached to a notorious house of ill-repute?"

"Vert's petition was referred to the Police Board, who approved it, and license was granted. After that I received information from my deputies that the saloon was still attached to a bad house, and I sent the matter to the Mayor with a request that the license be revoked. Cella & Repetto, on Eleventh and Locust streets, were also granted a license on the representation that they had taken out their 'stalls' and would not replace them. I learned from a deputy and from the police that the 'stalls' are still there, and I have asked the Mayor to revoke their license also. The Mayor has not yet done anything in these cases."

"I suppose there are other 'stall' saloons that obtained license in the same way, and have gone back to their old business?"

"I have been informed that there are several who took out their 'stalls,' got license, and put the 'stalls' back again. Their licenses shall be revoked at once."

There are about 1,700 saloons in St. Louis, of which fifty are reported as disorderly or disreputable.

Sidewalk Dangers.

Judge Lindley and a jury are hearing to-day the evidence in a $5,000 damage suit, Timothy Lordon against James H. McLean, Lawrence Bruce and James Stewart. Lorden alleges that he was standing upon the sidewalk near Broadway and Biddle street, under the walls of the Girard House on the 13th of September, 1889, when a joist of timber fell from one of the upper floors upon him, knocking him down and injuring his hip to such an extent that for a time it was believed amputation was necessary. The plaintiff claims judgment for loss of time, medical expenses, etc. Some alterations were going on at the Girard House at that time.

The Dimmock-Daly Suits.

The suits of Dimmock, property-owner on Third street, opposite the Post-office, against John J. Daly, a claim of about $5,600 in the aggregate, for unpaid rent, have been settled to day in court and satisfaction acknowledged. Mr. Daly refused to pay the monthly rents on account of the flooding of his premises, and injury to the stock through breakage of water spouts and defective plumbing service. The courts held that this was no defense for non-payment of rent and Mr. Daly has accordingly settled up.

Last night a meeting was held at Nick Williams's saloon, Second and Market streets, and Mr. Nick Williams, Charles Irwin and Pet Worley were appointed a committee to wait on the City Council in reference to having a new fountain put up in Jackson Square.

The rafting season of 1881 will conclude next week, having been the longest ever known in the history of the St. Louis lumber trade. The receipts at this port have been 150,000,000 feet of lumber, and 25,000,000 feet of white pine logs. The Viola Parker arrived yesterday evening with the last raft of the season.

On Christmas morning high mass will be celebrated in the Holy Trinity Catholic Church, Eleventh and Mallinckrodt streets, at 4:30, 6, 8, 9 and 10 o'clock. The church is now being handsomely decorated with flowers and evergreens. On the night of December 31 the bells will commence to ring at 11:50 o'clock and continue one hour, as a welcome to 1882.

A CREEK JUDGE.

He Chats About the Crops, the Law and the Troubles of the Nation.

Judge Sidham, of the Creek Nation, was on 'Change yesterday, a tall well built specimen of the American aborigine at his best. He is very swarthy and spare, very slow and deliberate in speech, very quiet and gentlemanly in demeanor. A reporter asked him what was new in the nation, and he remarked that the cotton was [illegible] been a particular[illegible] all in and the crop had been a very goo[illegible] good one. "This has continued, "[illegible] year for our people," he [illegible] Body is [illegible] the best since the war. Every-Th[illegible] making money, and making it fast. [illegible] Creeks are accumulating stock and getting their farms in fine condition. You know that we lost everything in the war and found ourselves completely out at its close. Since then we have been vigorously at work, and the results are beginning to show."

"I suppose some of the Indians are exceedingly wealthy?"

"Oh, yes."

"What is the population of the Creek Nation now, Judge?"

"Twelve thousand."

"It is not increasing?"

"No; only by the natural increase."

"Is there a natural increase, Judge? They say, you know, that your people are fading away."

"There is an increase every year. We would increase fast enough if they would let us alone."

"Payne means to move on Oklahoma again."

"So I hear. I wish the Government would turn that man over to us. We would kill him. Kill him and perhaps scalp him, although scalping is never done any more. The law ought to be made stronger. There is not penalty enough for strangers coming in among us. If a man has any property we fine him—but if he has no property he laughs at us. And we can do nothing."

"Eufaula is altogether an Indian town?"

"Oh, yes. There are no white families there at all. It is not a large town, but it is a very beautiful one."

SLY CHICAGO.

How the City on the Lake Sends Its Poor to St. Louis.

Bridget Murphy arrived at Union Depot this morning. She was found in the ladies' waiting-room nursing a six months old baby. In reply to questions she said: "I came from Chicago, and I haven't a cent in the world."

"Why did you come to St. Louis?"

"My husband went on a spree and I went to the county building for assistance. They gave me a railroad ticket to come to St. Louis, and they told me I could go to the Poor house here."

"Who told you all this?"

"The man in the County Commissioner's office, and he told me not to tell anything to the people here. I don't know a soul here."

"How long did you live in Chicago?"

"I lived there for thirteen years, but my husband used to live in this city, I suppose. This is why they sent me here." She told her story to Officer Burke and said she did not know what to do in a strange city. To-night she will be sent back to the sharp Chicago officials, who have tried this trick several times.

Are You Going to See the Whale?

The whale will be here Saturday night. Workmen are now engaged putting up a new and substantial house at the corner of Fourth and Spruce streets, which will be ready for the marine monster when he arrives. Side tracks have been laid from Poplar street into the lot, and on these the two large cars carrying the whale will be run into the new building, where the public will have an opportunity to see it during the holidays. The exhibition will open on Wednesday next. H. R. H. the Prince of Whales is 60 feet long, and weighed 80,000 pounds when taken from the water in Boston Harbor. It is the largest right whale ever caught and the first whale ever brought inland. Last winter it was exhibited in the principal cities of the North and West to hundreds of thousands of people. Mr. Fred J. Englehardt is the manager of the exhibition. Everybody must see the big whale.

LADIES are often very much bothered to know just what to get for a gentleman as a suitable holiday present. One of the nicest and most acceptable things we know of is a toilet or traveling case containing Brush, Comb, Tooth Brush, Razor, etc., just the thing for sleeping car use. We have a great variety of them for $3 up to $25. Call and examine. It affords us equally as much pleasure to show our goods as to sell them.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

Frank Greentree, Thomas Buhen and Henriette Barretta were jailed last night on suspicion, but were released this morning for want of prosecution.

Squire Graney is rapidly recovering from his late severe attack of rheumatism and will soon be attending business. When he sufficiently recovers himself and Constable Kelly will open a real estate and renting business in the Ziska Building.

Mrs. Nelson a middle-aged lady, residing on the Island, while passing a Chicago, Burlington and Quincy freight train about 5:30 last evening, was struck by one of the cars and thrown across the tracks. The wheels passed over both legs and one arm and crushed them in a horrible manner. Dr. Winton is in attendance, but little hope is entertained for the lady's recovery.

Mrs. Margaret Hanley, residing on Third street and St. Louis avenue, died suddenly at her residence last night. Mrs. Hanley was known to her neighbors as disregarding temperate habits, and unusual noises in her house after nightfall attracted but little attention. Last night strong drink gained the mastery and terminated the earthly career of its victim. About half-past 10 the neighbors heard a dull thud, followed by a loud crash, as if the house was falling to pieces, which was followed by perfect silence. Some of the women entered her room after a lapse of five minutes, and found Mrs. Hanley lying on the floor, with the stove lying across her legs. The woman was motionless, and, when raised up, found dead. The Coroner was notified and held an inquest this morning. The jury decided that death resulted from apoplexy, superinduced by strong drink. A few weeks ago the woman's husband died and it is thought that this led the wife to indulge more liberally than usual.

Montesano Springs.

The hotel at Montesano Springs is about to be put upon a solid basis. Mr. James D. Sublett, a well-known hotel man, has just obtained a lease of the premises, and will take hold immediately. Mr. Sublett is well known in the East, and has been in the business for many years. He has been lately located at Hughes' Springs, Tex. It was principally through the intervention of Col. H. M. Hoxie, manager of the Iron Mountain road, that Mr. Sublett has embarked in this new enterprise. Col. Hoxie is much interested in building up Montesano Springs as a summer resort. It is well known that the Springs are located at Kimmswick, on the line of his road, and Col. Hoxie has promised to put on seven or eight trains running to the Springs, the improvements to go into force as soon as possible. The Railroad Company is also preparing to erect at that point an elegant summer depot, one of the finest in the country. The work will all be finished before next spring.

Embalming the Big Whale.

Since the big whale was here last winter he has been taken through a thorough preserving process, wherein science has obtained a most wonderful victory over matter. In the midst of the unusual heat of summer, this enormous mass of flesh and blubber was preserved, and that, too, in the face of assertions made by some eminent scientists that "it could not be done." It was during the latter part of May that the whaling party had their cars run over onto an old switch built into the woods from the Mackinaw Division of the Michigan Central Railroad, near the shore of the Bay of Saginaw, and the the process of embalming commenced. Both day and night, without relaxation a single hour for seven weeks, the combination of chemicals was applied, and a most brilliant success was the result, so that to-day, after this monster has been nearly one year on the road, he looks as well as when first taken out of the water, and that without the strong odor of whale oil which was found somewhat objectionable last winter.

He will be here next Wednesday, and will hold his royal levees in a building especially erected for him at the corner of Fourth and Spruce streets.

SIMMONS HARDWARE CO.

Look Out for Them.

The December number of the Government Counterfeit Detector, just issued, contains, among other matter, a description of the two latest counterfeits in the market. The first is a $5 bill on the Boylston National Bank of Boston, Massachusetts. The bill is of the series of 1875, marked letter C, and dated October 28, 1864. The face of the note is well calculated to deceive, but the green border and back of the note are partly done in a crude manner, and the State arms in the left oval and the eagle in the right oval are wretched travesties. The second counterfeit is a $10 silver certificate of unusual excellence. The best method of detecting this latter is application of moisture to the Treasury numbers printed in blue in the lower left and upper right hand corners of the face. The color in the counterfeit will run or fade, while the original will not change at all. The geometric lathe work is also badly done.

THE JAMINET DIVORCE.

The Divorced Doctor Required to Give Bond for Payment of Alimony.

Judge Boyle passed this morning upon the application of Judge Pope, counsel for Mrs. Jaminet, requiring the divorced Doctor to give bond for the payment of alimony. As stated in yesterday's POST-DISPATCH the court has ordered payment of $225 per month for the support of Mrs. Jaminet and the support and education of the daughter Leontine, the first payment to commence January 3 of the new year. The court likewise allowed counsel for Mrs. Jaminet $400 to be paid on or before March 3, 1882. Ex-Gov. Reynolds, representing the Doctor, objected to giving bond. It was not a case of payment of alimony in gross and there was no necessity, he thought, for securing a monthly payment in this instance. The court, however, ruled that bond must be given within ten days in the sum of $4,000, with approved securities. Among some of the members of the bar there was an undertone discussion of the alimony fixed by the court, and a case was quoted where a physician who had been ordered to pay a large amount of alimony estimated upon his income from professional practice in years past had elected to diminish his labors and confine them to a sufficient amount only for self-support, but in the Jaminet case the opinion was expressed that the revenue from the real estate alone would be more than sufficient to meet the demands of the court and support the Doctor himself comfortably if he were to retire from practice to-morrow. The court, however, in determining the amount of alimony stated it had duly considered the declining years of the Doctor and the consequent diminution of his professional labor and profit.

The Weather.

The temperature of the weather this morning was 35 degrees above zero, having risen 6 degrees since yesterday, the atmosphere being much warmer. No change is anticipated for the twenty-four hours, and the weather will undoubtedly remain clear and fair. This is the general condition reported throughout the Mississippi Valley. Our weather for the next twenty-four hours will probably be received from the south. The wind is blowing steadily from intermediate points between the South and Southwest. No reports of storms of any kind have been received from any of the stations connected with the Signal Service office. The only places from which clear and fair weather reports have not been received are Denver, Col.; Dodge City, Kansas; Bismarck, Dakota, and North Platte, Neb. All of these places send in cloudy weather. These stations, however, are on the outside of the line of weather which will probably influence our temperature for the next two days. The stations in the South report clear weather, high barometer and southerly winds.

Sergeant Boyd's Protege.

A petition for a writ of habeas corpus was filed this morning and presented to Judge Thayer by Mr. O'Grady, in behalf of James Keehan, the step-father of Annie Holland, a bright little girl of 10 years. It seems that on the 1st of March last Sergeant Sam Boyd and wife, residing at 1325 North Seventh street, reached the conclusion that it would be pleasant to adopt a child. Sergeant Sam objected to the adoption of too young a child; he wished to be relieved of nocturnal attendance upon long clothes, and little Annie Holland, who had lost her mother some time since, just took the eye of the Sergeant and his kind-hearted partner. They assumed control of the child, the stepfather giving no deed of adoption, but simply requiring that the Boyds should educate her. Now the stepfather comes into court and avers that this condition has not been fulfilled, and, therefore, he demands the return of Annie. Judge Thayer ordered the writ to issue, returnable next Tuesday morning.

FIVE YEARS.

The Finding of the Jury in the Case of Chas. P. Emmerich.

A Case That Has Dragged on the Docket of the Criminal Court for Four Years.

After one mistrail and forty-three continuances the case of Charles P. Emmerich, charged with manslaughter, was tried in the Criminal Court to-day for an offense committed four years ago. Gov. Johnson appeared for the defendant and Robert Goode and Mr. M. McDonald for the State. The taking of testimony was begun yesterday and at noon to-day the case was given to the jury.

DR. JACOB T. SMITH

testified that he was a chiropodist at No. 306 South Fourth street. He had known Emmerich for two years and a half at the time of the first trial, when the defendant kept a laundry at Sixth and Walnut streets. He had had a conversation with Emmerich about medicines to assist conception. Emmerich afterwards told him that one of his girls was pregnant and in a bad way through his actions. He frequently went to the witness' office and borrowed instruments which the witness allowed him to take, but he did not know what the defendant wanted them for. Witness did not know the girl, Maggie Gibbons, who was employed in Emmerich's laundry. A picture was shown him but he could not say he had ever seen the face before. He accused Emmerich of being up to some devilry [illegible] at that time the defendant did not tell him what he was doing. Defendant frequently borrowed his instruments, but he, witness, could not tell what he used them for. He had asked and was told no to mind. One Sunday he saw the defendant in a saloon at Sixth and Walnut streets, and the defendant asked him to go to the laundry and told him that that girl of his was in a bad way. He said further that he had killed it, but he was afraid he had killed the girl, too. The witness did not ask what it was, but the defendant told him, that the girl had fainted at the laundry. When Dr. Smith saw Emmerich there the latter's hands and clothes were bloody. The defendant asked him to take the girl home, but he refused, and he then said he would get his wife to take her home in a carriage to Main and Mulberry streets. He was afterwards told by Emmerich that Mrs Emmerich had taken the girl home and was waiting then to see how the matter terminated. Emmerich had asked the witness in the event of the trouble resulting seriously to go and see the doctor and fix it all right, and he would pay him well for his trouble. Witness asked Emmerich if he bought he, witness, was a fool. Since then they had not spoken and he had not received his instruments from the defendant.

THE MOTHER OF THE GIRL

testified that her daughter was brought home in a carriage by Mrs. Emmerich. Dr. Auler testified to the post mortem examination. Two of the girls who were employed with Maggie Gibbons in the laundry testified that they had seen the defendant and the deceased kissing in the laundry.

Dr O'Reilly testified that the child had lived. No testimony was introduced for the defense. The arguments were short, and, after an hour's deliberation the jury returned a verdict finding the defendant guilty of manslaughter in the first degree and assessed his punishment at five years in the penitentiary.

EMMERICH

was convicted in 1879 and sentenced to four years in the penitentiary, but obtained a new trial. Since then, on account of the condition of the docket and the protracted illness of Mr. Beach, who was Circuit Attorney, and who had long hoped to prosecute the case in person, it was continued until the present term of the court. Gov. Johnson filed a motion for a new trial on the ground that there was no proof of venue, which the counsel for the prosecution held was proven. The seventh and last ground for a new trial is because the court erred in putting the defendant on trial for an offense for which a prior indictment had been preferred, and on which he had been tried, found guilty and a new trial granted on a new indictment without quashing the first or former indictment.

ANNIE DOUGLASS.

The Well-Known Cyprian Attempts to Commit Suicide

Annie Douglass, who a short time ago was the proprietress of two or three disreputable houses in the vicinity of Sixth and Myrtle streets, attempted suicide at No. 523 Myrtle street about 6 o'clock last evening by taking 125 grains of chloral. Of late Annie has met with several reverses, and it is supposed that the desertion of her friend was the cause of the rash attempt on her life. Dr. Trousdale was called in and administered antidotes, which, with much care, had the physician's desired effect and which materially interfered with Annie's future plan of operation. Detectives Desmond and Eggs raided No. 523 Myrtle street a few days ago and captured a lot of property which was supposed to be stolen and which was taken to the Four Courts to await investigation. Of late she has shown signs of depression, which was attributed to her love's desertion, and last evening the attempt to shuffle off was made. When the physicians left her they pronounced her in a fair way to remain another while in the vale of tears.

Shoplifting.

To-day a warrant charging Mrs. Mary Connel with petty larceny was returned to the Clerk of the Court of Criminal Correction and docketed for December 27. The accused yesterday gave bond with Mr. T. M. Reed as security. She is a good-looking lady about 30 years of age, and when arrested on Wednesday evening by Detectives Tucker and Browning at the St. Bernard Dollar Store, she was elegantly dressed in a black satin de Lyon dress and a circular trimmed with siberian squirrel skins. With the other property taken from her was a fine gold watch and chain. The prosecuting witness is employed at Scruggs, Vandervoort & Barney's, and charges the defendant with attempting to steal a fine silk cloak which was found on the floor. The conversation of the prisoner and the security led the officials to understand that they were man and wife, and the latter remarked that it looked curious for a man and wife to sign different names. Neither of the parties made any statement of the matter, though the police say that from the woman's manner and talk in the office of the Chief of Detectives they judged her to be a professional. It is said Mrs. Connel is really Mrs. Reed, and her husband keeps the saloon under the People's Theater.

Death of Henry S. Turner.

Maj. Henry S. Turner, a gentleman whose name is known wherever a St. Louis foot has trod, at a quarter to four this morning closed the record of a long and busy life by a happy and peaceful death. Full of years and honors, he has passed away surrounded by his children, his sturdy frame bent beneath the weight of age alone. It is not the purpose of this brief notice to recite any panegyric on the man who had passed away this morning early. There is no need for an obituary of a man who has left his mark so plainly upon the institutions of this city. He has been ailing for a long time past, and his death was not a surprise to his family, who recognized the fact that he was sinking for some time past. He died at his residence, 1705 Lucas Place, and the time for the funeral has not been set. In another column will be found an account of his life.

SMALL-POX.

No new case of small-pox was reported to-day. Up to 2 o'clock the Dispensary was besieged by men, women and children who wanted to be vaccinated, but there was no virus and the applicants had to be turned away. At 2 o'clock 1,200 points were received, 500 of which went to the Dispensary; the rest to the physicians and private individuals. Yesterday 420 persons were vaccinated at the Dispensary and 560 points were used altogether. Last night the only news from Quarantine was that Mrs. Seifert, Lilybeck. Misses McCune and Andrews were in a critical condition. Fuchs was improving. The others were all right.

Miss Kellogg's Arrival.

Miss Clara Louise Kellogg arrived at the Southern at 11:50 a. m. to-day, from Jacksonville, Ill. The train had been considerably delayed, and on Miss Kellogg's arrival she immediately retired to her room. A POST-DISPATCH reporter called upon her, but she begged to be excused from the terrors of an interview, stating that she was fatigued and really needed rest. Miss Kellogg is more rosy and plump, and a trifle heavier than when she was last in this city, but is otherwise not changed. When asked about her approaching nuptials, the fair cantatrice puts on a tired or an injured air, and shows great reluctance to continue the conversation. On another part of this morning's register at the Southern, at the distance of half a page from Miss Kellogg's autograph, was the signature, "T. B. Whitney, New York," stowed away among a lot of drummers' names. The gentleman did not appear to take any interest in the Kellogg party at all, but it soon became noised around that he was the man who was engaged to Miss Kellogg, and he was considerably looked at. Mr. Whitney is a slender, lightly-built man, with a thin face, dark hair, moustache and closely-cropped whiskers. He came in from the East this morning to meet Miss Kellogg, who is just returning from the West. He remained out of the city all day, as if he feared discovery.

YESTERDAY evening Market-Master Sullivan, of the Round Top Market, Broadway and O'Fallon street, arrested Michael Egner for offering putrid meat for sale, being a dressed hog that was badly bruised. This morning Egner was tried in the Second District Court and fined $25, which he paid.

A LETTER from Geo. H. Rising, of Rising city, Neb., was received at the State Board of Immigration to-day, stating that the writer wished information as to lands in Missouri especially adapted to stock raising. The writer also expresses himself as wanting to get rid of Nebraska's nakedness and blizzards.

A RUMOR is afloat to the effect that Mr. F. A. Thomas, of the firm of Thomas & Smith, is being pushed by his friends for Supreme Chancellor of the Legion of Honor. That gentleman is absent in the East and will not return to the city until after the holidays. At present he is Chancellor of the Compton Hill Council.

MR FRED M. MACARTY says that he did not wish to implicate Mr. I. Turner, the veterinary surgeon, in the attempted robbery at his house on Twenty-fourth street. He simply stated that Turner had called at his office. He has no reason to suspect him, and does not think that he was the man who called for the hunting boots.

CATTLE—The supply was small, and consisted altogether of butcher stock from common to fair. The demand from the different classes of buyers only moderate and they did not express much disappointment at the insufficiency of the offerings. Local speculators, the canners and interior shippers would have taken a fair number of butchers' stock had the supply proved larger. Stock and feeding steers none offered and in demand. Shipping steers slow and weak, and the few droves offered slow of disposal at mean prices. Milch cows with calves scarce and wanted. Ruling quotations steady.

OLD SANTA CLAUS.

Dr. Luximon Roy in a Fifth Street Show Window.

The Orientalist's St. Louis Career—A New Industry for Patriarchs.

Santa Claus is a myth twined fondly around every childish heart. Christmas-tide always brings hopes of him, and the eve of the greatest of all festivals brings the dear old chap himself across the top of the houses behind his fleet reindeers from the snowy and icy North. At midnight, by some strange and alarming coincidence that never strikes the child-mind as marvelous, he ties his panting team to the gable end of every building in which there is a good child dreaming of the dawn of the morrow, shakes the snow from his furry cap and shaggy shoulders, and with a big bag bursting with toys and sweetmeats, dolls, skates, red-top boots, little blue mittens, hobby horses, fire crackers, and the Lord only knows what else, descends every chimney in the whole gleaming land, and steals through the fire-places to the row of long stockings that belong to the little curly heads that cluster on the pillows and the little blue eyes that are looking now upon pictures of dreamland. Santa Claus fills all the stockings up. Even in the house of the poor there is some slight trace of his visit left. From infancy up to the noontide of youth there is seldom light enough let into the average intellect to dissipate the fancy that Santa Claus is a real personage coming from somewhere like Christmas and going everywhere like the good fairies that are read about to leave joy and pleasure behind as the holiday portion of every household. Of the 49,683 children under 14 years of age in this city, fully nine-tenths would be willing to vote for Santa Claus for any position from ward constable to President of the United States, if they only had a franchise and old Santa could be persuaded to enter the arena of politics. Childhood is credulous to an extent that often wrecks its hopes. Santa Claus is one of its stock traditions and 40,000 wind storms with a regular old Kansas flare-up in the atmosphere couldn't shake the twining affection for Kris Kringle, as Santa is sometimes called, from the heart of the ordinary small boy or extraordinary small girl. These introductory remarks are necessary to give eclat to the latest phase of originality developed by who has been before the public in various capacities for the past year. About everybody who can read has read about Dr. Luximon Roy. He is an Orientalist of the most pronounced type. He allows his hair and beard and thumb nails to grow long, and he walks the streets like a dervise in search of a lost home and haunts public buildings, walking like an abracadabra gone to seed or an amulet that has had half its value taken away by boring a hole through it. The Doctor is a small, stout, squatty man, with a brown dolman thrown over his shoulders, a huge white hat with a Colorado crown and a Texas brim resting like a section of the Sierra Madre range aslant his brow, and a general appearance of having been turned out of nature's workshop when the establishment had only a portion of the material necessary to make either a desperado or a high priest of Osiris and consolidated the "tailings" into the old Doctor's frame to clear up. He came here from some lamented village on the Iron Mountain road, in which he represented the old Times as correspondent. His connection with the Times continued after his advent into the city. He was a kind of "go-as-you-please" attache of the journalistic invalid, but did not distinguish himself very largely until he attended the Keene banquet at the St. Louis Club about this time last year. It was a bitterly cold night, but the Doctor, with his customary disregard of the weather, wore a linen duster and straw hat. Under his linen duster was one suspender and a red flannel shirt. In this airy and attractive costume he sat at the left of the distinguished tragedian, and made the bill of fare hum. He ate and drank as if this were the first meal he had ever struck in the sixty long and gray years of his life and he now expected to lay in a supply for three score years more. Nobody knew who he was, but he was plied with food and cake and "guyed" mercilessly. At last he told a pitiful story that moved the hearts of all present and moistened their eyes. He spoke of his poverty and homelessness, and a collection was taken up by Pat Short, the treasurer of the Olympic, and $36 was contributed, which the old man joyfully and with commendable alacrity accepted. Then he sang and danced and told anecdotes and made phrenological examinations of the heads of those present, entertaining everybody until morning, when he was left standing in the shelter of a doorway to wait for the daylight. Robson and Crane, the comedians, were there and told the story of the banquet all over the country, appropriating the entire credit of everything to themselves. After this Manager John W. Norton and others were kind to the old gentleman. He was always in the front seats at the theater and on the "head set" at every banquet.

AN ECCENTRIC OLD CITIEZN,

HE BLOSSOMED OUT

into a peddler of phrenological charts. Afterwards he in some mysterious manner became the proprietor of a tin lung-tester which he allowed people to spit into at five cents a spit. He haunted the hotels where prominent actors and actresses sojourned, seeking to finger their cranial bumps. He got a chance to practice his Hindostanee when French brought the Nautch girls and the Indian jugglers here last spring. Dr. Roy was with the tricksters all the time, singing and talking the Hindoo language as glibly as if he had lived his whole life under the shadow of the highest Himalayas. He was born in India, he said; had spent many of his younger years there; had received collegiate training in this country; was a classmate of Henry Ward Beecher and a dozen other prominent persons; had been a surgeon in the Turkish army and on the field at Plevna; was at the battle of Balaklava, and so on to the end, away off in the distance. During the past few weeks he had not filled the public eye to any alarming extent. The cold weather had played out lung-testing and the Doctor looked around for some other business. A day or two ago a brilliant idea began playing under his olive-hued forehead. He looked at himself in the show-window of a toy-shop, noted the patriarchal Kris-Kringlish appearance his white hairs and long beard gave him and he went around trying to hire himself out as Santa Claus. He walked into the Famous boot, shoe and clothing house, saw Mr. Specht and asked him if he wanted to hire a Santa Claus. He had struck the right spot. He was just the man Mr. Specht was looking for. There was no necessity for a make-up. The Doctor was hired on the instant, his measure was taken at once, and at noon the following day he took his seat in a large arm chair in the big show window at the corner of Fifth and Morgan streets. He looked as much like Santa Claus as do the accepted portraits of the Christmas hero. He had on a fur-trimmed robe of old gold, a turban or cap of red velvet and white fur, red pantaloons and top-boots. A winter scene with reindeers fills the window, and dolls, toys, hats, caps, papier mache toys and a thousand and one salable articles are strewn around. In the midst of this picture, in the gorgeous raiment that he has been thrust into, Dr. Roy appears to childish eyes as the full and fair realization of all their

DREAMS OF CHRISTMAS TIME

and all their desires to look upon the joyous face of this dear old saint. "Don't tell me any more, mamma," said one little miss yesterday, "that there isn't any real Santa Claus, because now I've seen him, and he's a real nice old gentleman." And so he is. The Doctor is a source of delight to the children. He has vast audiences in the street, of big and little people, from the time he goes into the window at 2 p. m. every day until 9 o'clock at night. He sings, plays a flute with his nose, handles the toys and does a hundred things to amuse and entertain his audiences. He remains in view the whole time, retiring only at dusk for a few moments to eat a big supper—for he is still as wonderful an eater as he showed himself to be on the night of the Keene banquet. "Famous" pays him well, and he will have employment during the entire holiday season. He seems to enjoy the sensation he creates, and takes a peculiar pleasure in impressing the children that he will come down the chimney to fill their stockings on Christmas Eve. To show what faith the little people have in him, it may be related that yesterday a tiny bit of a girl stole away from her mother and gave the following note to Mr. Specht to be delivered to Santa Claus:

"DEAR SANTA CLAUS:—Please bring me skates, doll-house and furniture and cradle, and lots of candy.

"LITTLE MARIE SCANLON."

"I'll have to buy the dear little creature something," said the Doctor as his dark eyes danced, and he went back into the window with his brown face lit with a smile, to be "a living Santa Claus" to the crowd that stretched almost across the street. He is probably the only person among the 460,000 people in St. Louis who can play Santa Claus without "making up" his face. As a show-window decoration for Christmas he is a success.

MUSIC.

The St. Louis Choral Society's Concert.

The inaugural concert of the season was given by the above society in Mercantile Library Hall last evening, in the presence of an audience that tolerably well filled the hall, and which seemed to be apathetic in the extreme, not being roused to a pitch of enthusiasm once throughout the evening. The concert opened with Beethoven's Egremont overture, full of delicious harmonies, and played with considerable aplomb by a band of thirty instruments selected from Mr. Meyer's St. Louis Orchestra, and the same orchestra did heroic work throughout the evening, considerably enhancing the whole performance, and upon several occasions proving itself invaluable in keeping the choirsters on time and in tune where they otherwise might have utterly failed. The orchestra itself showed a weakness in the violin department. The march and chorus from "Tannhauser," by Wagner, bright and tuneful in its construction, proved one of the most pleasing and acceptable numbers on the programme. The chorus, which consisted of some sixty voices, many of them well known in musical circles, did their best in this opening choral number, and were it not for a noticeable want of precision in attaque, the rendering of this march might be characterized as being almost beyond criticism. Beethoven's Mass in C major came next, the solo parts being allotted to Mrs. McPheeters, Mrs. M. C. Mills and Messrs. T. Doan and Jos. Saler. Of this selection it might be said that there were several voices in the society that could have done more justice to the music, which, however, was of a very trying character. The "Kyrie" was taken a trifle too slow and opened rather unsteadily, which was remedied later on, however; the altos were altogether overpowered, as indeed they seemed to be throughout the evening. The "Gloria" is written high for the soprano, which occasioned a flatness at certain points; Mr. Doan sang well, but the music generally was too heavy for his voice, as indeed it proved to be for the rest of the soloists throughout the mass. The "Qui tollis" was taken also too slowly; Mrs. Mills, who possesses a mezzo-soprano voice sang the lead in this number acceptably well. In the concluding "amen" the tenors, over-anxious to excel no doubt, spoilt the effect coming in a beat too soon; this last allegro was taken in a good tempo and sung with appropriate spirit. The "Credo" was well rendered with the exception of some indecision in attacking the leads. "Et incarntus," full of beautiful passages, was taken well by the solo quartet, though it was the generally expressed opinion that the bass part was far too light, the voice of the singer being of a decidedly brassy, nasal character, and consequently not calculated to blend with the others. The soprano also failed sometimes to reach exactly up to pitch in this number. "Et resurrexit" was sung by the bassos in unison in the lead, though written for a solo voice. The alto solo part in "Et vitam" was rendered almost inaudible by the strength of the orchestra, and the sopranos failed to reach the final "amen," which marred their previous very credible efforts. In the opening bars of the "Sanctus," sung without accompaniment, the chorus fell almost half a tone, which defect was rectified by the orchestra immediately afterwards.

The time and pitch of the "Benedictus" were not preserved faultlessly, but the following number, "Agnus Dei," was perhaps the best return for a season's hard work presented throughout the concert, the crescendos and nuances being generally strictly observed. The conductor, Mr. Joseph Otten seemed pleased with the musical results of the evening, and no doubt he must have given a great deal of time and hard work to the drilling of the choruses, and should he persist in the same commendable course during the coming season such efforts must no doubt result in pleasing the patrons of music generally.

The next concert of this society will be looked for with interest, when it is to be hoped the English language will be more prominently represented in the libretto. The concert lasted just one hour and twenty minutes and gave very general satisfaction.

THE KELLOGG CONCERTS.

The first of the Kellogg farewell concerts will take place in Mercantile Library Hall this evening. There has been a large advance sale of seats and there is every reason to believe that America's greatest prima donna will take leave of St. Louis with large and fashionable audiences before her. The concerts will be two in number, the second being given to-morrow night. The programme for each occasion has been carefully selected with a view to presenting Miss Kellogg at her very best. She will be assisted by several people of acknowledged musical and operatic reputation. Miss Kellogg is soon to be married to a gentleman of Boston, when she will retire from the stage forever. Her present tour is made for the purpose of giving her admirers an opportunity to hear her sweet voice for the last time. The programme for to-night is as follows:

1. Chopin—Andante and Polonaise. Herr S. Liebling.
2. Donizetti—(La Favorita) Duet. Miss Poole and Sig. Tagliapietra.

BEETHOVEN CONSERVATORY.

The first grand concert of the Beethoven Conservatory, at Memorial Hall, will take place this evening, when an unusually interesting programme will be presented. All the principal pupils of the conservatory will appear in selections that are popular and that cover the entire range of classical music. The concert will be under the direction of Mr. A. Waldauer, who is working hard to make the Beethoven Conservatory one of the finest and most successful of our educational institutions.

England's Mercantile Navy.

New York Cor. Philadelphia Ledger.

A numerous company of merchants, ship-owners, journalists and others visited the magnificent Cunard steamer Servia this afternoon by invitation, and after a thorough inspection of the ship, conversation incidentally turned on the discreditable position of our own country with reference to the ocean carrying trade. One prominent merchant and banker (not a protectionist) remarked that he "never looked at these magnificent English vessels without a feeling of humiliation as an American." He was not prepared to say whose fault it was, but he was sure the country would heartily approve any measures which Congress might adopt looking to a change for the better. He did not care who built the ships, so that we owned them. If there was no other way of getting a mercantile navy he was in favor of that way. "We put foreigners into the army during the war without scruple," he added, "and we might safely put foreign ships into our commercial navy until we could build one of our own." He was tired of seeing fifteen European steamships sailing past the Battery every week, and the stars and stripes absolutely nowhere. It wounded his American pride. This line of remark elicited somewhat different views from other gentlemen, who occupy a not less influential position in the mercantile community. They agreed that the existing condition of things was all that had been represented, but they radically differed from the remedy proposed. They did not want to provide a market here for the old hulks of the Clyde and the Mersey, and to find employment for English and Scotch mechanics at the expense of our own. We could do better than that. Mr. Blaine had hit the nail squarely on the head when he said that all that is needed was to extend to ship building the same measure of protection that had been accorded to other great interests. If Congress adopted that platform, we should ere long obtain our share of the carrying trade. If it declined to do so, then there was no help for us. There is no telling how much further the discussion would have been pushed had not the band, stationed at the forepart of the vessel, struck up "Brittania Rules the Waves," alternating with "Hail Columbia." The incident is worthy of mentioning as showing the feeling that exists on the subject, and also showing how John Bull's splendid commercial steam steel navy is working up a sentiment among us that one may reasonably suppose will ultimately develop into such a policy on the part of the Government as will tend to improve our standing as a first-class maritime power.

GOOD POCKET KNIVES,

Very cheap, at Simmons Hardware Company.

Mr. Henry James, Jr.

Boston Letter to Hartford Courant.

This gentleman, who came to America to reside for six months, was presented to the members of the St. Botolph Club at a reception on Saturday evening. Your readers may perhaps like to know how the author, who is now so much talked of on both sides of the Atlantic, appears. Mr. James is of about the medium height, say five feet and seven inches; he is full, but not stout in form; in age he appears to be in the neighborhood of forty years. His face is full and just now rather ruddy. His hair and eyes are dark, but not black; his forehead high, with a slight tendency to baldness on the temples. He wears his beard entire, but is rather close cropped. His dress, air and manner are those of an Englishman, and it was the subject of remark on Saturday evening that in his general contour of face and form he somewhat resembled the Prince of Wales, as the latter is remembered here. Mr. James has contracted some of the habits of speech of Englishmen, but his natural tendency seems to be to rather rapid utterance. There was considerable curiosity to see him, though the company present was not a very large one. He is making his residence in Cambridge now, where his father and brother reside. His father, who is also widely known as a man of superior intellectual power, is now well advanced in life. He often comes into Boston. His son William James is a professor in Harvard College. There is another son, Wilkie James, who lives in the West. Mr. Henry James, Jr., is likely to be a lion in our literary and social circles, though his slighting of his own country for that in which he has of late had his home has a tendency to make many shy of him. His latest novel is being much read just at present, and is more talked about than anything in the literature of the day. Everybody is dissatisfied with its plot; but the verdict among appreciative people is that it is not only his greatest work, but that it evinces qualities of talent that place its author in the front rank of modern writers of fiction. There are those who claim for Mr. James genius, and genius of a high order.

An itemized account is furnished by the attorney.

The German Press Nestor.

Frederick Muench, credited with the title of the Nestor of the German press in America, died on Wednesday last at his farm in Warren county in his eighty-second year. He was born at Niedergruenden, Hessia, Germany, the son of a Protestant clergyman. He studied for the ministry and succeeded his father as a vicar of the village church. In 1833 he jointly with Paul Follenius founded the Giessen Emigration Society and came to America, settling in Warren county, where he devoted his time to farming and his leisure to the study of political economy, etc. For a quarter of a century he published from time to time semi-religious and philosophical works, and was famous for his contributions to the German press on the questions of the day. In 1856 he stumped the country for Gen. Fremont. He was in the State Senate from 1862 to 1866, and was a member of the State Constitutional Convention after the war. The funeral takes place to-day.

CHARLES W. CURRY

Will Have to Go to Jail for Three Months,

And Pay a Fine of $100 for Killing John W. Prettyman—What the Prisoner Says.

This morning the jury in the case of Chas. W. Curry, who was tried yesterday in the Criminal Court on a charge of murder in the second degree, returned a verdict to Judge Laughlin finding the defendant guilty of manslaughter in the fourth degree and assessing his punishment at three months in the City Jail and imposing a fine of $100. This is the lowest punishment prescribed by the statutes for conviction of manslaughter in the fourth degree. The definition of manslaughter in this degree under the present statutes, and as given to the jury by Judge Laughlin in his instructions is as follows: "But if you acquit him of murder, and from the evidence believe and find that at the city of St. Louis, and in the said month of August, he did in a sudden heat of passion, in the manner and by the means described in the indictment, not in necessary self-defense and without a design to effect the death, feloniously kill one Nathaniel Prettyman, you will find him guilty of manslaughter in the fourth degree."

Curry heard the verdict without any agitation whatever. Messrs. Lodge and Johnson, the attorneys for the defense, expressed their intention to make a motion for a new trial.

was seen a few minutes after the verdict was returned and asked what he intended to do. "I am going to leave the matter entirely to my attorneys. Mr. Lodge says he will file a motion for a new trial. Now that the verdict has been returned and its all over, I'll say that I no more intended to kill that man than you did. I did not kick him. How could I kick him without cutting the skin. I gave that family all I earned. They were in my debt. I never interfered with them, and now, that it makes no difference, I say I am as innocent of that man's death as you are."

Mr. Lodge said: "It was insinuated that the defendant and the girl Sallie were improperly intimate. This was not true, and I would lose forty cases before I would insinuate anything against a little girl unless I had positive proof of the truth of what I said. The attack made on this girl was needlessly cruel and there was not a particle of evidence to sustain it."

This case has excited much interest. The defendant, though a young man is well known in this city. The bottom facts of the case did not come out at the trial in more than hints and suggestions, they were not gone into in detail; a damaging feature of the case to the defendant's interest was the fact that the fatal difficulty was brought on by the daughter disobeying her parent. It was hinted to the jury on the testimony of a little girl, who said she had seen the girl Sallie the next morning after the fatal affray that the girl had passed that night down town, while she claimed in her testimony that she was at her aunt's on Grand avenue. The girl's aunt was not on hand to testify concerning this at all. A motion for a new trial will be made, but will probably not be pushed. Messrs. Lodge & Johnson had nothing to say concerning the verdict only to condemn the attack made on the girl's virtue without proof to sustain it.

CLAIBORNE'S CRANK.

It is Turning Out Depositions to Establish the Canterbury's Reputation.

The taking of depositions before Notary Edmunds in Chamber's law office, opposite Four Courts, in the matter of John Gropper, proprietor of the new Theater Comique, was resumed to-day. The depositions eight persons were taken yesterday, each testifying to the charaeter of the audiences visiting the New Comique and the performances that were given there while the place was running and before the expiration of the lease.

Deputy Marshal J. R. Sabini to-day deposed that he had visited the New Comique on Sixth street, near Poplar, four or five times. He saw nothing improper there. He had been all over Europe and this country and attended theaters. The class of performance on the occasion of his visit to Gropper's place, was just about the same as usually attend variety theaters. He had seen women in short dresses on the stage, but did not think these dresses were any shorter than others he had seen at the legitimate theaters in this city. He saw no noisy disturbances during his visits, nor did he see any one ejected from the place. He had never seen anything which he thought improper going on and found the audience just about the same class as always attend variety shows. He thought John Gropper the proprietor tried to manage the place properly. He saw no difference between this and other variety theaters.

RETAIL GROCERS.

They Are Anxious to Form a General Association.

A scheme is on foot among the retail grocers of the city to form a general association, similar to those now in existence in Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Baltimore and other cities. The object is to protect the retailers against the tricks of the wholesale houses and to insure mutual action. Among the grievances which the association is expected to remedy is light weights, the practice of wholesale houses selling in small quantities to act as consumers, the dead-beat and bad pay nuisance and several others. Some of the retailers also complain of the plan pursued by other houses of selling one staple, sugar for instance, way below cost as a "leader" for other trade. Mr. W. F. Coulter, editor of the St. Louis Grocer, is interesting himself in the formation of the association. He says that there are 1,300 retail grocers in this city, and that favorable replies have already been received from a great number of them. A meeting will be held towards the end of the month.

Crops of Vaccine Virus.

From the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

Dr. E. L. Griffin, President of the Wisconsin State Board of Health, and proprietor of the vaccine farm at Fond du Lac, called on Health Commissioner De Wolf yesterday. The prime object of the Doctor's visit to Chicago was to purchase two car-loads of heifers for use in the manufacture of vaccine points. He selected ninety-one beautiful young animals, Short-horns and Devons, and with these he will vaccinate the other 916 he has already. A statement has been published that the same heifers were revaccinated many times. This is a mistake. The animal having once been vaccinated is thereafter impervious to the influence, like a human subject. The Fond du Lac farm is one of the oldest and most extensive for the purpose in the world. To show the production it is only necessary to state that Dr. Griffin has disposed of between 60,000 and 70,000 points within the last three days. The whole Northwest, he says, is feverish with the small-pox excitement, and the disease seems to be the worst in Dakota, parts of Minnesota and Northern Wisconsin, probably originally introduced by emigrants. The number of vaccine points to be obtained from one animal varies greatly; sometimes but fifty can be obtained, and in other cases over 1,000. The cattle used are from three months to four years of age. Young new milch cows are the most susceptible and productive. The light red color is the best, and black the most objectionable. The inoculation is always with the cow-pox, never by small pox, as is stated by ignorant physicians and others opposed to vaccination. The sooner the points are used after preparation the better. The Fond du Lac farm sends its products to Turkey, China, Africa, and, in fact, to all quarters of the globe. The farm comprises but five or six acres, but is finely supplied with stables. The feed given is of the best quality of hay and oats. The very best stock are purchased—the calves the doctor bought yesterday came from New York State. It is impossible to get a good crop from a scrawny subject. The cattle are uninjured by the process, and can be used for any purpose after serving the farm. Dr. Griffin buys his cattle in Chicago because here he has his pick of many, and can buy cheaper than in Wisconsin, where the roads are practically impassable at present.

BANK CONSOLIDATION.

The German-American Swallows Up the Biddle Market Savings.

Capital to be Increased to $150,000 and the Bank to Join the Clearing-House—Other Arrangements.

The Biddle Market Savings Bank went out of existence this morning. A joint meeting of the stockholders of the German-American and Biddle Market Banks was held last night, and at a late hour it was determined to take the step mentioned. Most of the gentlemen interested in the two institutions are very friendly and the step has been under consideration for some time. When a reporter called at the former quarters of the Biddle Market Bank, under Stolle's Hall, on Biddle street, this morning, he found a force of clerks busily engaged in settling up the books and paying off depositors in checks on the German-American Bank, located at the corner of Fourth and Franklin avenue. There was not much of a rush and there seemed to be the most perfect confidence.

The Biddle Market Bank goes entirely out of existence, the consolidation entirely swallowing it. An item in a morning paper to the effect that the bank only changed quarters, remaining otherwise as heretofore, was laughed at by the gentlemen interested. Mr. John Dierberger, the cashier of the German American Bank, was seen this morning, and he stated that the consolidation had been arranged late last night, and that all the details were now arranged.

"On what basis is the arrangement made?"

"We have agreed to assume all the liabilities of the Biddle Market Bank, which ceases to exist. They have turned over to us more than enough to meet all demands of cash depositors, and have also made arrangements to meet all time deposits. Their customers are paid off in checks on our bank. A good number of their depositors have come down here already and opened accounts with us, and we expect to get the greater part of them."

"What is the reason of the consolidation?"

"The directors of both institutions thought it the better plan, inasmuch as it cuts down expenses, etc. Then, with the surplus we get from them we intend to raise our capital to $150,000 and become a member of the Clearing-house. We have given the sixty days' notice required by law, and a meeting of the stockholders will be held on February 27 to vote upon the proposition to increase our capital stock from $100,000 to $150,000. Under the rule, a bank must have a capital stock of at least $150,000 before it can join the Clearing-house."

"Will any of the Biddle Market directors become connected with the German American?"

"Oh, yes; several of them were down here this morning and expressed great interest. There are no vacancies just now, but there will be. Casper Stolle, the president of the Biddle Market Bank; Thomas Ferrenbach and Claus Vieth, directors, will join our board just as soon as the arrangements are perfected."

The Biddle Market Bank was organized in 1867. It was always regarded as very solid, and was much patronized by the small depositors in the neighborhood of Biddle Market. At the time it ceased to exist Casper Stolle was president, Conrad Stauf, vice-president, and F. Koch, cashier.

The Cholera at Mecca.

Alexandria Cor. London Times.

The country is much disquieted by the last news from Mecca. The cholera, which had almost disappeared from among the pilgrims, has suddenly leaped into dangerous activity. From eight a day the mortality has risen to fifty, and 150, and finally 250 a day. The pilgrimage is over, and the pilgrims, 70,000 in number, are already on their way to the sea, whence they will disperse to all parts of the world. Six thousand of them are Egyptian, and there are thousands more whose destination is either Turkey, Asia Minor, Syria, or the African coast. The quarantine authorities here, an international body, at first thought it best to order the total repulsion of pilgrims from our coast. The impossibility of executing such a measure made them finally decide on the imposition of a series of quarantine periods on the eastern coast of the Red Sea—fifteen days at the station El Wej, ten days at Tor and finally three days' observation at Moses' wells, near Suez. The maintenance of a real quarantine will depend on the soldiers told off to form the various cordons, and people rather gloomily shake their heads and ask what authority exists in the country which can make the soldiers perform a dull, disagreeable duty. However, there is a more cheerful side of the matter. Those who know the country well have not much fear of any severe outbreak of cholera. In the first place the winter is coming and cholera has never come to Egypt, save in spring or summer. It is sixteen years since it last visited us, and then it came for a month in the heart of summer. The Nile was low; the country had suffered from a cattle plague that had slain 801,000 head of cattle, whose bodies had been left unburied or been cast into the canals; the people were badly fed. Now the Nile is brimming, the weather is cool, the country is prosperous, the people are well off, the public health is exceptionally good. The death-rate of Alexandria last week was considerably below that of London. It must also be mentioned that this recent increase in the death-rate at Mecca followed the day when all the pilgrims climb Mount Ararat and each slays his sheep in memory of the sacrifice. This would be done without any hygienic restrictions, the bodies would rot and the air for a time would be charged with foul smells. But such a danger is only temporary. All things considered, there is no great cause for alarm. Twice before in the last ten years there has been a similar danger, and it has been each time averted. Such alarms must continue to recur until the pilgrimage itself is abolished.

Dickens.

From the London Athenæum.

Dickens had his faults of course, and they were many and grave. He wrote a great deal of nonsense; he sinned continually against taste; he could be both noisy and vulgar; he was apt to be a caricaturist where he should have been a painter; he was often mawkish and often extravagant; and he was sometimes, as in certain parts of "Oliver Twist," for example, more offensively inept than any other great writer. But his work, whether bad or good, has in full measure the quality of sincerity. He meant what he did, and he meant it with his whole heart. He looked upon himself as representative and national, as, indeed, he was; he regarded his work as a universal possession, and he determined to do nothing that for lack of pains should prove unworthy of his function. If he sinned it was unadvisedly and unconsciously; if he failed it was because he knew no better. We feel this as we read. The freshness and fun of "Pickwick," a comic middle class epic, so to speak, are mainly due, it may be, to high spirits, and perhaps the book may be described with justice as a first improvisation by a young man of genius, not yet sure either of expression or ambition, and with only vague and momentary ideas about the duties and necessities of art. But from "Pickwick" downward to "Edwin Drood" the effort after improvement is manifest. The man's genius did but ripen and expand with years and labor; he spent his life in developing from a popular writer into an artist. He extemporized "Pickwick," it may be, but into "Copperfield" and "Chuzzlewit," and the "Tale of Two Cities" and "Our Mutual Friend," he put his whole might, working at them with a passion and a determination hardly exceeded by Balzac. He had enchanted the public without an effort; he was the most popular of modern writers almost from the outset of his career. But he had in him at least as much of the French artist as of the middle class Englishman, and if all his life long he never ceased from self education, but went unswervingly in pursuit of culture, it was out of love for his art, and because his conscience as an artist would not let him do otherwise. This is enough to make us pause when we consider his work.

Vanderbilt's Doings.

From a New York Letter.

The railway king avoids Wall street and all other unnecessary excitement. The report that he had suffered a paralytic stroke suggests at least his liability to such a misfortune, and hence the importance of keeping quiet. His luxurious style of life is not adapted to promote health, and this is sufficient reason for unfavorable reports. The fact that he has just been sued by two Rochester men illustrates that liability to such annoyances which his position involves, and this suit will be of a highly vexatious nature. Vanderbilt is at present much engaged in the construction of his palace, which is necessarily very slow work. The job has been under way three years, and it may require two more to finish it. Considering the brevity of human life, this is a disproportionate share to be spent in mere preparation for living. William has an immense estate to bequeath, and he would like the railway empire preserved intact, but experience has taught him that any favoritism may lead to breaking the will. His sons, William K. and Cornelius, each inherited $2,000,000 from their grandfather and so did Frederick. The latter, howevers is rather an outsider at present, having forfeited paternal favor by marrying a woman almost old enough to be his mother. Neither of the two above mentioned sons are business men, and hence can hardly be expected to succeed their father in his distinguished position. William is trying to teach them business and hence has made one of them a director, while the other is his private secretary, but this is a very different thing from controlling the destinies of a railway empire. William knows this, and hence the future of the family is overhung with many doubts and misgivings, and the construction of his will is a task of peculiar difficulty.

Dinners of the German Emperor.

From the American Register of Paris

After the frequent notices we read in the papers of dinners at the Emperor's palace, and tables laid for twenty or more covers, it may not be uninteresting to learn something about the Emperor's table in general. Emperor William is in the habit of taking, about 7:30 a. m., a simple coffee with a large allowance of milk and a couple of small breads without butter. At 1 o'clock p. m. the second breakfast (lunch) is served, alternately cold or warm. The dinner takes place regularly at 5 o'clock. If the Emperor has one or two guests the table is simply set in the lower apartments of the palace, the menu remaining the same which he is wont to order for himself, consisting of four or five courses, which the chef de cuisine submits early in the morning and the Emperor approves. If the dinner is a large one the table is laid in the upper apartments. The invitations are given by the Emperor at an early hour, the arrangement of seats being then and there discussed with the Court Marshals. The invited guests receive their host in a saloon adjoining the dining-room, where the latter salutes, and after a conversation of ten or fifteen minutes precedes them to the table. The Emperor takes light claret or Moselle with soda-water, and coffee only occasionally after large dinners. A cup of tea, without cake or bread, after the theater, concludes the frugal repasts of the day. When the Empress is present the menu is submitted to her, and, except when a large party is invited, the Emperor takes his dinner in the Empress' apartments.
